Bridgehampton

The Hamlet Again Takes Its Rightful Place As A Classic Colonial Town

By Dan Rattiner

Bridgehampton is about to embark on a project that will finally, and at long last, restore that community to its former glory. They are about to begin renovating the Hopping House, the historic mansion that is on the southeast corner of the crossroads of the town. They will also restore the six acres of grounds around it, and open it to the public, probably by next year.

To appreciate just what this community has done for itself in the last few decades, it is only necessary to look at what it was, say, around 1914, the way it was around 1974 and the way it is today. It is a remarkable turnaround.

At the crossroads to the town, in 1914, there were, on each of three corners, magnificent old historic buildings, some of them dating back to colonial times. On the fourth corner there was an open park which had served as the mustering grounds for the Bridgehampton Militia during the Revolutionary War. These buildings included Wick's Tavern on the northwest corner that dated from the Revolution, the Bull's Head Inn on the northeast corner, dating from 1840, the Hopping House, also dating from around 1840 and, like the Bull's Head, a magnificent revival building of long ago times. The mustering grounds was on the southwest corner. All four of these historic sites looked out onto what we call the monument, but which at that time was called the War Memorial to all the young men from Bridgehampton killed in the Revolution and the Civil War. It is fair to say that in that year, Bridgehampton rivaled its neighbors, East Hampton and Southampton, in beauty and history.

In 1914, the Main Street of Bridgehampton had been freshly paved. And spilling out to the west on that street were a few storefronts, including the original Bridgehampton Bank building, probably the most well-built structure in town (Starbucks today), twenty or thirmentalists or town planners, had brought historic Bridgehampton low. The militia grounds had been bought up by a developer who had built a series of stores and parking lots on it. Wick's Tavern had been torn down for a gas station. The owner of the Hopping House was in a serious financial bind and to make ends meet, he had leased the front lawn to another gas station. And the Bull's Head Inn was abandoned after a drug scandal involving the chef at the Inn, and would remain abandoned for about a decade. In fact, it was being threatened by Sunoco Oil, who had gone into contract with the owner of the property to tear that down to build still another gas station.

Gas stations were everywhere in downtown Bridgehampton then. Besides the two across from one another at the monument, there was a third one across from the Candy Kitchen (where the florist is today), another next door to ty private homes on the north and south sides of the streets, the Catholic Church, the Presbyterian Church with its great white steeple, and the Lutheran Church.

And one by one, the gas stations folded up for lack of business and their properties turned into something else.

Four years after the year I have chosen to showcase the grandeur of this town, there was taken the famous photograph of all the townspeople on the street, about 500 of them, massed in front of the monument, spontaneously cheering and celebrating the news of the end of World War I. This was a beautiful, historic town.

By 1974, the free market system, without any brakes on it from historians or environ-

You see, until about 1975, automobiles were always breaking down, getting towed and going into the shop for repair. 95 out of every 100 cars were made in Detroit. And the attitude of Detroit, one they were proud of, was "if the car breaks, we will fix it." The European and Japanese cars were even more badly built. It

Wonderful Scenery. Interesting Neighbors. Pure Relaxation.

(and that's just getting to Florida)

WHEN YOU'VE LOGGED AS MANY MILES DRIVING TO FLORIDA AS WE HAVE, you learn a thing or two about long-distance driving. Like why it drives people crazy. The stop-and-go traffic. The waiting. The detours. The frustrating snarls. The tailgaters. State troopers.

That's why more and more sensible seniors are taking Hampton Jitney's Florida Service. It's safe, affordable, and best of all, relaxing. Each trip is staffed with two-professional motor coach drivers; and an attendant serving refreshments during the trip. To make things even easier, we'll transport your automobile to Florida on one of our insured auto carriers, so you can enjoy the comfort and convenience of your own car once you're there. We pick up both passengers and cars at the Southampton Long Island OMNI, Long Island Expressway Exit 63 at the Hampton Inn and at NJ Turnpike Exit 9, East Windsor, New Jersey. In addition, we also pick-up passengers (only) at Exit 52 Long Island Expressway, at Exit 23 in Queens and in Manhattan. We'll even transport just your car if you decide to fly. It's completely up to you.

En route to Florida, enjoy an overnight stay in North Carolina including dinner and breakfast, the Jitney stops in Jacksonville (Kingsland, GA), Titusville, West Palm Beach and Ft. Lauderdale on all trips. On select trips, West Coast service to/from Orlando, Brandon, Sarasota, and Ft. Myers is available. Of course, we also make frequent stops along the way so you can stretch your legs.

This fall, why not board one of our roomy, climate-controlled, lavatory-equipped, luxury motor coaches and enjoy a vacation before your vacation.

Simply load your car onto one of our insured auto carriers, then sit back and relax. Next stop... sunny Florida!

We put you in a Sunshine State of Mind.™

was not until around 1980 that the Japanese discovered that the technology could now support a newer slogan. That slogan was, and is, "the car won't break." Everybody else has been playing catch up ever since. And one by one, the gas stations folded up for lack of business and their properties turned into something else. Today, only the most westerly gas station, by Snake Hollow Road, remains.

In any case, in 1974, the rest of Bridgehampton, as it got built out from these desecrated historic sites by the monument, had evolved into a classic farm town. The biggest store in town was Agway, right on Main Street. There were a few taverns, the Pulver Gas Propane building, a few lunch-eonettes and just one restaurant/nightspot — Bobby Van's which in those days occupied the building where World Pie is now. Visually, Bridgehampton was a mix of auto mechanics, farm equipment and feed stores, a printing company, the water company building, a drug store and occasional migrant workers, who were sometimes standing around or walking through town drinking whiskey out of a paper bag. Bridgehampton was bound together by the churches and by the library. It was a workingman's town.

One of the worst things that was proposed back then was the tearing down of the Bull's Head Inn. Sunoco had an option to do it. But by that time, there was an environmental group that had opened up in town, called the Group for the South Fork. There was also Dan's Papers. And a new hub of cultural and intellectual activity, the Elaine Benson Art Gallery. These were the result of "city" people coming in, and their activities were not completely appreciated at that time by the locals. Few local people saw the great beauty that lay beneath the working class exterior of the town. Bridgehampton, the diamond, had become a diamond in the rough.

I wrote articles in Dan's Papers at the time suggesting that people tear up their Sunoco Credit cards and send them to the President of Sunoco at that company's Philadelphia headquarters. After awhile, the President of Sunoco sent a contingent of Sunoco Vice Presidents to see me in Bridgehampton with a set of plans and a proposal. If they could gain my support for the plan they would make this compromise. They would only buy the front lawn of the Bull's Head Tavern. They'd move the Bull's Head back on the property and turn it ninety degrees so it faced onto the Sag Harbor Turnpike. The three story historic building could then live in harmony with the beautiful Class B Colonial Sunoco Station. I pointed out that what they were proposing was nothing more than to duplicate what was across the street — a three story nineteenth century treasure with a gas station on the lawn. Yup, they said. I said I doubted it. But I'd think about it. I called them the next day. No deal, I told them.

Because of this, and other efforts, the Bull's Head was saved, and bought by a wealthy townsperson named Lynn St. John, who over the years took care of it and set it up as an antique shop. It is an antique shop today. (Target took the place over for a month early this summer.)

A few years after that, a crucial vote was taken by Bridgehampton residents about whether to close the Bridgehampton School. They voted not to do that by a margin of three to two. Bridgehampton School survived, and thrived. Then, a group of civic-minded citizens

GEORGE FANTASIZES ABOUT A EUROPEAN SPA.
Pat says, "In your dreams."

For over 30 years, I've indulged George's every fantasy, no matter how far out they seemed. And most of the time they've been fine.

But, this time he's gone off the deep end. Suddenly, he decided that he needed the ultimate bathing experience.

And the only place he can get it is at a European Spa.

I know that isn't so. And, if he'd only stop working long enough to get into our pool, he'd know it too.

BIOGUARD'S® MINERAL SPRINGS® pool

care system transforms any pool's water into the most pleasurable, soothing and luxurious experience that you can imagine.

MINERAL SPRINGS sanitizes the water with the perfect combination of nature and technology.

So, one night when George was almost asleep, I seductively whispered in his ear, "George, I have a fantasy... (that really got his attention)...much better than your European Spa. It's about MINERAL SPRINGS."

Come in to talk about it.

George is the one with the smile.

Floating High Across The Swimming Pool As King Of The World

By Dan Rattiner

Advertising salespeople, if they are worth their salt, are forceful, persuasive, upbeat and fun to be around. And that was why, on a Monday morning two weeks ago, I found myself at my desk at Dan's Papers sitting on a giant, blue exercise ball.

"You're gonna love this, Dan," Kathy Rae said, standing in my doorway holding the blue exercise ball. I was sitting in my comfortable office chair. "Let me come around. Here. Stand up. Let's move out that chair. You're going to sit on this stability ball. You have no idea how wonderful this is going to be for your back."

Kathy was followed in by my secretary, Lise Visser, who seemed upset that she had not been fast enough to stop her from just bursting in like that.

I stood up. The chair was scooted away. The exercise ball shoved in.

"Sit," Kathy Rae commanded. I sat. "Try bouncing up and down a little." I bounced. "There. Isn't that great? Perfect for your back. And balance."

"I'm not so sure about this," I said, struggling to keep the ball under me.

"Sit on it all day. You'll be amazed."

"Why don't you give this to somebody else downstairs?" I said.

"She did already," Lise said. "EVERYBODY'S got one."

You can see from my office to the hall and Lise's office beyond. There was a yellow ball at her desk.

"Okay. I'll sit on this as long as I can. Now go away."

"Promise me you'll sit on it all day."

"I can't promise that. What if it hurts?"

"It won't hurt."

I looked around helplessly. "All right, I'll try."

"That's the spirit," Kathy Rae said. And she left. I turned to Lise.

"Where did she get these?" I asked.

"I have no idea."

I was falling a little bit sideways. I righted myself. "Help me up. And get my chair. Let's get this out of here."

"You CAN'T take this out of here."

"Yes, I can. Tell me when Kathy Rae leaves the building. Then I'm taking this out to my car."

"That's terrible."

I had an idea. I could float this exercise ball

THE CHEWING GUM OF BRITNEY SPEARS

By Dan Rattiner

There's a new movie out called PAPARAZZI. It stars Cole Hauser and Robin Tunney and the reviewers trashed it. It came and went. The plot was as follows. Hauser and his wife and kid move to a quiet residential neighborhood to get away from his movie star status. But the photographers stalk him. Flashbulbs go off and his wife drives their car into a tree, which puts his son in a coma. The paparazzi are relentless. Hauser slugs one of them. And his mates say this will not go unpunished. The family will be destroyed. Basically this turns into something of a Stephen King movie, with the evil villains stalking their victims with Nikons and Canons. Of course, in the end, good triumphs and the villains get theirs. Personally, I took a pass on this one.

I bring this up because of Britney Spears' chewing gum. Britney apparently has a habit of chewing gum, and then, when she is done with it, simply spitting it out. Wherever it lands, as far as she is concerned, that's the end of it.

But it's not the end of it. If you go on Ebay and type in BRITNEY SPEARS GUM you will come upon hundreds of people who have picked up these bits of chewing gum and are offering them up to the highest bidder.

"You could get a DNA test to prove that this is the real deal," is the copy that accompanies a picture of the well-chewed gum, in one entry. The seller, who identifies himself as Brian Johnson of Mississauga, Ontario, says he was working backstage as a cameraman at a in the swimming pool on the side of my house. Let the wind blow it around. Everyone would love it. But it couldn't be blue. I have green decor around the pool. Blue wouldn't do.

"I'll trade for a red one," I said. Red goes with green.

One hour later, when I was told the coast was clear, I carried the red exercise ball down the stairs and out to my car. I put it in the back seat. And if Kathy Rae came back before the end of the day and asked about it, I would tell her I was going to use it at home, which was true. She never came back.

Five days later, on Saturday, my sister, my mother and my brother-in-law were poolside, at one end of the swimming pool. The brother in law was asleep on a chaise lounge. The rest of us were on green metal deck chairs, talking about this and that. The bright red exercise ball, the only object in the swimming pool, was gliding in a very stately manner across the surface.

It was interesting just how the ball accomplished this in such a noble and dignified way. You would think as the wind blew, the ball would roll along the water. But it wasn't doing that. It just kind of slid. And there was something black and small on the very top of it. That's odd. I stood up.

"Where are you going?" my sister asked.

I had, by this time, walked to the edge of the pool where I was close enough to identify it.

"There's a cricket on the ball," I said.

"Now, how could have gotten up there?" my sister wondered.

A moderate gust pushed the ball, and it did roll a little. But as it did, the cricket held on tight, and then awkwardly walked back up to the top. The new top.

"I have no idea," I said.

My sister and I both stared at it for awhile. And then my mother, who saw something was being stared at, began staring too.

"The cricket is like the King of the World," I said.

"Like in that Titanic movie," my sister said.

The ball slid over toward one side of the pool, and then gently hit the coping and bounced slightly. The cricket had a good grip. Now the ball was sliding off in another direction.

By this time, my mother had come over to stand beside me and look at the cricket.

"I think he's dead," she said.

"No, he isn't. He just moved up to the top."

"No, he's dead."

The cricket definitely wasn't dead. Filled

Britney concert in Toronto in April when he saw her do her thing. "Through the camera, I saw her spit it out," he wrote. He is asking $1,000.

There's a piece of gum from Spears' 2000 Wembley Arena concert in London. The seller says he's had it for three years and wants $53 for it. A steal.

Another piece of gum, a seller claims, was spit out in anger by Spears outside her home in Los Angeles in August.

No gum spitting would be permitted here in the Hamptons, of course. This is a refined community, protected by members of the various Ladies Village Improvement Societies who are active in the different villages. If Britney let loose some gum here, she'd be lectured about it. It could be flattened into the bricks on the sidewalk and remain there for a hundred years, she would be told. What do you think this is? Sidewalk of the Stars? She'd be made to get down on her knees to scrape it up. Or she'd be made to get one of her employees down on their knees to scrape it up.

Well, maybe not.

The other day, I was walking along Lily Pond Lane in East Hampton when I saw director Steven Spielberg walking his dog. The dog assumed the defecating position, and Spielberg stopped, then fumbled in his pocket for a plastic baggie to clean up afterwards. Before he could do anything, however, a paparazzi leaped out of some nearby bushes, ran over, scooped up the poop with a poop scooper and ran off.

Spielberg stood motionless for a moment, looking at the departing perp. And then he put the baggie back in his pocket, took out a piece of paper and pencil and scribbled some notes on it, apparently about a plot for his next movie.

As for his dog, he sniffed around, a puzzled look on his face. Who took the stuff? It was here a minute ago.

The Code

Wearing The Required Clothes And Exhibiting The Proper Manners

By Dan Rattiner

The Bridgehampton Advisory Council held a meeting last week at which time they considered creating a "code of conduct" for visitors and summerpeople for dealing with the local people in the community.

"Let's start with things as stupid as saying 'thank you,'" one council member said.

"Maybe what we really need is some public relations work from the people who respect the area to the schmucks who don't," CAC member Ted Damiecki said to a reporter from the Southampton Press.

The discussion ranged widely for awhile. Someone suggested that a list of courtesies be posted around the town. Another person gave examples of the rude and discourteous behavior currently being bandied about. Someone said the visitors, who are mostly from New York City, are "rude, intolerant and carry an air of entitlement," though, of course, there are exceptions. In the end, however, nothing came of this discussion, and the members moved onto other things.

The whole thing was reminiscent of what happened about fifty years ago in Southampton Village, when the Village Board got together there and created the now famous precise terms, the parts of your body that you must keep covered while on the public streets in that community. These parts include from the top of your aureole to halfway between your hip and the knee. To accomplish never exposing to public view this area, you must drape an opaque (non-see-through) material over those parts at all times.

The aureole, by the way, is the medical term for the outlying area of the human nipple.

A dress code in Southampton Village, a politeness code in Bridgehampton Village — if the code is passed, our summer people are going to drive themselves crazy, being surly and mean in one community, polite and sweet in another and putting on and taking off pullovers over bathing suits as they go.

These communities were all founded between 1639 and 1664, and for a long time there were fines for not going to church, whippings and highly controversial dress code in that town. It is the law today there, and at all the entry points to the village there are signs referring you to the code which spells out, in very for not helping dig the trenches at the beach to drain the ponds, time in the stocks for uttering obscenities or engaging in fornication. There was even a person accused and subsequently tried in court on charges that she was a witch. This community, collectively, is entitled to a uniform dress code and a uniform courtesies code. And so, at this time, I would like to propose such a code. Here it is.

1. LEARN THE HAMPTONS HAND-SHAKE. Make a fist, stick out your pinkie and your index finger (grabbing the other fingers with your thumb to keep them in place) and hold them out in front of you. A local person, facing you, will do the same thing. Touch the pinkies and index fingers. Say, "Yeah! Booga, booga, booga."

2. USE THE HAMPTONS WORD FOR 'WELCOME.' In Hawaii, you say Aloha. Here in the Hamptons you say "Hampton-ha." Try it in front of a mirror until you get it right. The emphasis is on the first syllable.

3. SAY "THANK YOU" IN HAMPTONS. In Hawaii it is "mahalo." In the Hamptons, it is the bonac phrase "Finest kine."

4. LACE YOUR SPEECH AS MUCH AS

POSSIBLE WITH BONAC. Bonac is still the preferred speech of the natives. It derives from a county in England where the local settlers came from, three hundred years ago. For example, you would say "our pool man never shows up, bub. You know of another one who lives, maybe 'up street?' Yes, yes?"

5. WEAR THE COLORS OF THE VILLAGE YOU ARE IN.

In Southampton when you go out for the evening, wear everything pink and green. The pink things—the socks, the tie etc.—can have little green, smiley frogs on them. Westhampton Beach people wear white shirts with open collars and gold chains around their necks. In East Hampton, wear blue and white striped pullovers (horizontal stripes) made of broadcloth, and jeans. Also big, floppy, straw hats. In Sag Harbor, wear a rubber yellow rain slicker and if you've got the guts, bell bottoms. Also boating sneakers.

6. DRIVE A RANGE ROVER. Always offer a ride to the people waiting at the bus stops. "Yes, yes, bub, anybody want a lift up street?" Three or four will run over, shouting "finest kine," and offer the Hamptons Handshake. You're in.

7. LEARN PROPER BEHAVIOR WHEN

GETTING A PARKING TICKET. The thing to do, while the teenager is writing on his pad, is to curse (mildly) at your car and kick one of its tires. "Bad. Bad." Receive the ticket gracefully.

"I cannot thank you enough. I hope this has not been a bother for you. Please accept my apologies on behalf of my Range Rover. I just don't know what it was thinking."

8. PROPER MERGING.

Where two roads come together, the proper thing to do is to let the person driving in the other lane come in ahead of you. Years ago, we had a terrible problem in these parts when local people simply refused to proceed without the car in the other lane moving in ahead of them. It created terrible tie-ups. We will, hopefully, not be returning to those days again.

9. PRAISE EVERYTHING. What a wonderful high school building. The skies are just so, well, blue. I've never seen so many, whatever those things are, in one place. You have very expensive merchandise, but it is worth every penny.

10. BUY LOCAL. Which communities grow the best avocados and where can I find the farmstands in that community that sells them?

LIU Officials' Actions Suggest The End Of Southampton's Curriculum

By David Stoll

Long Island University's decision to "move" the undergraduate programs of Southampton College to C.W. Post has raised a seemingly endless array of questions and criticisms, as reported frequently by this paper. The latest: What will happen to the funds raised at this year's "All for the Sea" concert? And what will happen to the Southampton College identity once the College is moved to C.W. Post? Also, on that second question, should anyone other than today's students care?

Follow the Money. On Monday, August 23, 2004, Rod Stewart performed at Southampton College for its 13th annual "All for the Sea" concert, as part of his 44-city tour promoting his album "As Time Goes By...The Great American Songbook: Volume II." The "All for the Sea" concert is touted as raising "scholarship funds for the College's renowned programs in marine and environmental science." Past performers included Crosby, Stills and Nash, Tina Turner, Paul Simon, Jimmy Buffet, Tony Bennett, Tom Petty and Bob Dylan. Tickets this year ranged from $55 for general admission tickets to $50,000

This being the first "All for the Sea" concert since LIU announced the fate of Southampton College, many had a sense of nostalgia and sadness. And there were questions. When asked where that money is going in light of the closing of Southampton College, Ms. Curcio-Kleinman emphasized that only the undergraduate programs of Southampton College are being transferred to C.W. Post, programs which are not the intended beneficiaries of the "All for the Sea" concern. Scholarship funds for the graduate marine and environmental sciences programs will continue to receive the proceeds, according to Ms. Curcio-Kleinman.

For now, the marine and environmental science programs will remain at the Southampton College campus

for a 10-seat Chancellor's Founder Scholarship table. According to the head of public relations at C.W. Post, Paola Curcio-Kleinman, this year's concert brought in a whopping $1.5 million.

For now, the marine and environmental science programs will remain at the Southampton College campus — where they surely belong, given the area's ocean, salt-water ponds and tidal wetlands. Southampton

College's Website proclaims that its location is "one of the most ecologically beautiful but fragile areas of the country. The marine and environmental programs have capitalized on this superb natural laboratory," and that "the College's unique seaside location, research vessels and on-campus marine station provide access to a variety of habitats, both coastal and oceanic." However, even these well-located programs may soon follow the undergraduate programs to the dry inlands of Nassau County, not quite a hotbed for marine sciences: Ms. Curcio-Kleinman ominously cautioned that "no decision has been made yet on marine and environmental sciences."

LIU's public statements indicate that further decisions will be announced in October. In that context, Ms. Curcio-Kleinman's statement is quite sinister. While there is no reason to believe that the "All for the Sea" funds will be dedicated to anything other than the marine and environmental sciences program, the question where that program will reside is serious and worrisome. After all, if the $1.5 million raised thanks to Rod Stewart's performance — apparently an all-time record for these concerts — is ultimately spent on a "marine" program taught at some landlocked location, isn't that a fraud upon all those generous contributors and Mr. Stewart himself? Do I hear "refund, anyone?"

The Existential College. For months, the public has been told that Southampton College is not being closed down, but merely "moved" to a different location. Indeed, we are told that Southampton College will exist not only in spirit, but in name: there will be a "college within the college" at C.W. Post. Perhaps we are meant to think of a restaurant that moves to a new location, like, Alison by the Beach. But when a restaurant moves, the owner and chef go with it, and make sure that the food and service remain consistent. What of Southampton College? Will the unique programs survive the move? Will the faculty familiar with those programs work at C.W. Post? Will there be a program called "Southampton College" at C.W. Post? Will Southampton College in any way retain its identity?

This is where the tire hits the road, and the answers seem to be a series of resounding NOs. We already know that the disrupted Southampton College students will be housed away from C.W. Post. And we know that the librarians are likely to be sent to LIU's Brooklyn campus. And we know that many faculty are not interested in moving to Brookville or Brooklyn. And we know that some students are not in a position to attend school away from the East End. And now there is more.

It has recently been attributed to LIU officials that, once the current Southampton College students have graduated, there may be no Southampton College. Officials are not sure whether they can attract new students to the Southampton College program at C.W. Post. For now, LIU asserts that its focus is on making sure that the current students, who are being so horribly disrupted, are at least able to complete the programs they signed up for, even if at a different location. However, there is no certainty that prospective students will apply for this "college within a college" program, nor is there even a procedure in place for students to apply to Southampton College within C.W. Post. Whether the problem here is one of substance or a failure of marketing is unclear, but the continued existence of Southampton College appears to be in doubt.

Yet, let's not pretend that Southampton College can exist at C.W. Post. After all, even if certain Southampton College courses continue to be taught at C.W. Post, and degree programs continue to be offered there, the notion that Southampton College can be "moved" to Brookville is nothing more than a word game. People come to Southampton College not just for its programs but for the opportunity to spend four years in this very magical pocket of America, with all it has to offer, including unique access to some of America's greatest writers and artists. Southampton College in Southampton will cease to exist in less than one year. So, does it really matter whether certain programs at C.W. Post are offered under an irrelevant Southampton College banner, or whether incoming students have the opportunity to apply to some Alice-in-Wonderland "college within a college"? The important fight is to keep Southampton College or some variation of it here in Southampton, and to make sure that the marine and environmental sciences program does not suffer the fate of the undergraduate program.

Deadlock

Two Sisters, A Mansion And The Sag Harbor Village Library

By Jerry Cimisi

It's a small town drama that reveals the universal in human nature. It happens to take place in the midst of the Hamptons — specifically, Sag Harbor. The village is witnessing a court battle between two sisters over a building the library wants to buy, while a group of library supporters is at odds with the library's desire to relocate.

The John Jermain Memorial Library is in the historic district on the corner of Union Street and North Main Street. Immediately up the block from the library is a three-floor house, nearly two hundred years old. Helga Morpurgo wants to sell the house, Annselm Morpurgo doesn't. Helga has taken Annselm to New York State Supreme Court in order to force the sale.

The adjacent library wants to buy the property, but both sisters see the $750,000 the library offered last year as too low. Helga is seeking — through New State Supreme Court action — to have the house sold at auction for a minimum of $1.5 million, while Annselm has been quoted as saying she would never sell the house to the library. Rather, she would let the library share a portion of the grounds with her, as part of an ambitious renovation to create "trophy condos" and a two-tier 16 car parking facility along with such options as a 32-bed think tank and a museum/plaza complex.

In the spring of 2003, the library announced it planned to move to a site it had purchased on the south side of the park (in the direction of Bridgehampton). An existing house would

AN ALARMING SITUATION ON THE HIGHWAYS

By Ali Spencer

June 28th, 2004, 6:30 p.m. Tereso Benitez, a construction worker from El Salvador, was struck and killed while trying to cross County Road 39 in Southampton.

August 9th, 2004, 6:28am. A pedestrian was struck by a car while trying to cross County Road 39. He had to be airlifted to Stony Brook University Hospital.

August 18th, 2004, 4pm. A Jamaican mother, Daphne Lynch, was hit by a car and killed while trying to cross County Road 39. Mrs. Lynch, who worked for the Hampton Jitney, had been in the United States for six months.

August 23rd, 2004, 1:30pm. Alberto Ortiz from Bay Shore was killed on County Road 39. For unknown reasons, his truck swerved into oncoming traffic and collided head on with a horse trailer.

September 3rd, 2004, 3:30pm. Another major accident occurred in front of the Texaco on County Road 39. At least one person had to be airlifted to University Hospital at Stony Brook.

Five major accidents on one six mile stretch of road. Four deaths in two months. In August, it was one death a week. Something is clearly amiss.

If you were in Southampton this summer, especially in August, you did not have to be acquainted with the victims, or even with the stories of their deaths, to have been affected by these accidents. You simply had to be in your car trying to drive through Southampton. People, delayed for hours, literally got out of their cars and sat on the side of the road.

On August 18th, the day of Ms. Lynch's death, it took one of my coworkers three hours to get from our office in Bridgehampton to her home in Center Moriches. Her commute is typically 45 minutes.

On the afternoon of August 23rd, the day of Mr. Ortiz's death, the manager of a store in be torn down for the new structure. The old library would become an archival storehouse for several historical groups.

In protest of this move away from the heart of the village and the historic district, the John Jermain Future Fund, Inc. was founded in May, 2003. It would raise money to buy the Morpurgo property. Through philanthropic donations it would find a way to keep the library where it was. The Future Fund and the Library Board often clashed.

Each of these "players" in this drama had a personal perspective, of course.

Helga Morpurgo said, "The house was built by a Captain Vail in 1812. My parents bought it in 1965. My father was a doctor, my mother an artist. My father was in semi-retirement. He practiced out of the house. My mother had a studio there. The house always had a C.O. for eight apartments. So many people in the village, especially newlyweds, lived there at one time or another."

Sisters Helga and Annselm, born in Rome a year apart in the 1930s, are both artistic. Helga has written plays. For a while in the early '90s, she headed a play troupe that staged readings at the Sag Harbor Inn. Annselm has written poetry and plays and established a degree of notoriety (under the pen name Artemis Smith) for "pulp fiction" novels about lesbianism in the late '50s and early 60s. (Odd Girl; Third Sex; This Bed We Made.)

In the 1980s, Annselm founded the Savant Garde Institute, a not-for-profit arts organization that she runs out of the house on Union Street. Late in that decade, she sued The Southampton Press which had run an article claiming the activities of the institute were mostly nonexistent. The theatre group Helga shepherded was under the auspices of the institute.

At any rate, there was an eventual falling out between the sisters.

Helga said, "My mother died of bone and liver cancer in November, 1975. My father also had a heart attack that year. I had gotten a $5,000 grant from the NEA for literature — that was a lot of money in the 70s, and I took my father with me to California for his health. I didn't like the environment my sister was creating for him." (He died in 1978.)

"Before my mother's death, the title to the house was put in her name alone; as her children, the house passed to myself and my sister. I transferred my half of the house to my sister in exchange for a second mortgage in order to give my father back at least part of his house. The only way I could give him back anything was by denying my inheritance. Annselm was supposed to make the mortgage payments to my father. She didn't."

Helga added that she wound up paying a good deal of the expenses to keep the house going — a charge her sister Annselm denies. "I'm the one who carried the house over the years. My sister always had a place to come to," she said. Helga lived at the house for most of the eighties and early nineties, apart from sojourns to other states. For the past ten years, she has been living in East Hampton.

But Helga says that because the second mortgage was never satisfied and she had paid the house tax often as well as many expenses for the house, two years ago she would not pay several thousand dollars of property tax without getting Annselm to sign something. "In the past three years I paid close to $10,000 in property tax," said Helga. Annselm agreed to give her 37.5 percent of any sale. Annselm said she did this not because she legally had to, but "because she's my sister."

Another 37.5 percent would go to Annselm. The remaining 25 percent would be claimed by the Savant Garde Institute, which, of course, Annselm heads.

In regards to the sale of the property, the institute plays another, and perhaps vitally important, role. Annselm said, "The institute has a lease until 2099. Whoever buys the building has to honor that. Either I or one of my clones will be around here until 2099."

Allison Gray, Director of the John Jermain Memorial Library, said that the library's need to expand is crucial. "This past August, the number of users we serviced went up 45.5 percent from only the year before. For the size of the community we serve, this is a small library. We have seven Internet computers that were used 100,000 times in the past year.

"The library originally tried to purchase the Morpurgo property two years ago," she said. The $750,000 offer was refused.

But Ms. Gray does not see the acquisition of

By Debbie Tuma

For as long as I can remember, my father has had a passion for fishing. This love of the sea inspired him to continue running a charter boat long after most captains retire. Although he attempted retirement, the salt water called him back. Or maybe it was the thrill of the catch. Or getting that first cup of coffee every day at the crack of dawn, at Salivar's Restaurant at the docks.

But whatever it was, it was enough to keep my father happily fishing the waters of Montauk for 60 years, and he is still going strong, at age 81. A few years ago, when he thought he might retire, he sold his old wooden boat, The Dawn, which he has had for many years. But then when he realized he missed the water, he became the captain of his friend Bob Bozak's boat, also called, The Dawn, which he is still running. It is located at Salivar's Dock.

Salivar's Dock is next door to the former "Tuma's Dock," which was created during the early 1950s by Frank Tuma, Sr. He and his brother Charles Tuma, my father's father, started the charter fishing in Montauk during the 1940s, out of the Montauk Yacht Club, and also out of the former Montauk Docks, which at that time were located over by the waters near the Montauk Rail Road Station. Back then, there was only commercial fishing, until Frank and Charlie started the sport fishing business, which eventually took over the docks now at the end of West Lake Drive.

As these docks grew, Frank Tuma, Sr. built Tuma's Tackle Shop, which included a gift shop. There, he booked boat charters. It has since become known as the Johnny Marlin Dock.

For almost 50 years, Tuma's Dock was a bustling area of activity, with many charter boats moored. Next door was Duryea's Dock, owned by the late Perry B. Duryea, Sr. During the 1980s, Frank and Marion Tuma, and their children, Lexa and Frank, Jr., ran a restaurant and fish market there, called, "Tuma's Dock & Chowder House."

My father and his brother, Burt Tuma, always fished while growing up in Montauk, but neither of them thought of making a living at it like their father Charlie, who was the captain of the first charter boat called, Dawn. After leaving the service, my father earned a degree in civil engineering in the Midwest, and Burt went to the Fort Schuyler Merchant Marine Academy. But after college, with the salt water still in his veins, my father turned down numerous engineering offers to take over his father's fishing boat, and he has had a boat called Dawn ever since.

Their cousin, Frank Tuma, Jr., who owns Tuma Real Estate in Montauk, also started charter fishing in his own father's footsteps, and ran several boats during the 1940s, including the "Gannett," which was built in 1948. This boat was taken over by his son, Frank III. Although he eventually went into real estate, Frank Tuma, Jr. recalled that "the building of Montauk, before the motels, was based on the fishing industry, and mobs of people used to come here by train to go sport running." Although my father was hoping for a mate, he had two daughters. At least we liked to eat fish, and looked forward to those family fishing trips or sails to Block Island for the day.

Growing up, we learned from an early age how important the weather was, so everyone was quiet when the weather report came on each night. In our kitchen, we also had a barometer, wind indicator and tide report on the wall. My father's job was based on the weather, which also included several major storms and hurricanes over the years. My sister Wendy and I have many memories of sitting in the basement with our mother, with a kerosene lantern, waiting for my father to return from the docks in the middle of the night. At times of hurricanes, he and his mate would have to sit on the boat and "ride out the storm," so the boat wouldn't blow out to sea. He would always leave in his yellow foul weather slicker and boots, and come back soaking wet.

My mother and sister used to enjoy riding on the boat, but I was the one who took an interest in fishing, and liked to troll off the stern, or try to steer the boat. As a child, the 36-foot Dawn seemed like the Queen Mary, especially when I was behind the wheel, high up on the bridge. My father told me to aim for a buoy or jetty and steer toward it, and I did. I always liked the thrill of hooking the fish, but I always felt a tinge of guilt about killing a living thing.

During college, waitressing at Gosman's Restaurant in Montauk, I would be waiting on customers at their outside deck, when the "Dawn" would ride by in the harbor, and I would run to the rail and wave to my father. My customers, who were usually from the city, always got a kick out of that. They always used to ask me what we did in the winter in Montauk, to which I used to goof around and say things like, "Quilting Bees and Spelling Bees," just to get their reaction.

Growing up with a charter boat captain father has its advantages and disadvantages. One advantage was that I ate lots of fresh fish, and my parents even canned their own tunafish, straight from the Montauk docks. One major disadvantage, as a teenager, was that I would sometimes meet my rather perturbed father on our front steps, early in the morning, as I was coming back from my summer nightlife, and he was on his way to go fishing at dawn.

When I sometimes wonder why he still wants to get up at 4:30 a.m., to ride his truck down to Salivar's Dock for coffee with his fellow fishermen, I think about how it feels to sail out of Montauk Harbor at daybreak. To hear the gulls calling, to see the sun coming up, and to sense the excitement of a day's catch, I guess I can understand why this is a lifestyle it would be hard to quit, even after 60 years.

For almost 50 years, Tuma's Dock was a bustling area of activity, with many charter boats moored.

The fishing "obsession" continued, and my mother, who is from outside of Boston, knew she married a devout fisherman when, on their honeymoon in Point Pleasant, New Jersey in 1949, my father called his brother in Montauk every day to "see how the blues were

I guess you are never too young to appreciate a luxury. "Bringing that old fashioned aesthetic into a child's environment has long lasting and joyful repercussions," says Erica-Lynn Huberty, a professional fine artist and designer for over ten years. Her work resides in the private collections of several celebrated musicians, artists and prominent business people in the Hamptons and New York City. She has an uncanny knack for mimicking famous children's book illustrations, and is celebrated for her unique and beautiful depictions of nature and wildlife in historic styles. Her murals start at $800 to $9,500 depending on the room and wall size. The one shown measures 4 by 4 feet.

Aura (Dawn's Teeth) Sculpture - $13,980

What do you think about a sensuous sculpture on your property? Ulrich Pakker's sculptures meld stainless steel into curvaceous forms, softening the hard glare of the metal by working it into more organic shapes. Aura is 60"tall x 40"wide x 24"deep. Warmth and color derive from the bronze, patinated turquoise inside the cutouts and brown inside the arch's "tunnel." The bronze will continue to age naturally. It is deceptively light, weighing about 120 pounds. All Pakker's arch sculptures are also models for 10-foot to 22-foot arches. Each arch has a distinctive character: some leaning, some pierced through, some with big bites taken out of them. The negative empty space of the cutouts alternates with the smooth, solid arch form. The price includes shipping, crating insurance and transportation. Available thorough Pamela at R P Art - Ulrich Pakker Sculptures, 2442 NW Market #157, Seattle, Washington. 206-789-7454. began, on their own, putting up flower boxes and wooden benches on Main Street to beautify the town. This evolved into the Bridgehampton Village Improvement Society. They still keep the town beautiful.

I don't hold out much hope for the two pieces of town that remain missing. Wick's Tavern is torn down, and that's that. And the row of stores remains on the militia green and that's that. But at the other end of town, things have thrived to make up for this. The Community House became a true public facility for weddings, antique shows, meetings and, upstairs, dance classes. The Danse Arts classes have been going on there for twenty-five years now. Across the street, the Bridgehampton Museum has thrived, and several old historic buildings have been moved to the vast lawns on that property. It is the keeper of this town's treasures today and a true tourist attraction.

Strangely, through all this, the Hopping House remained in terrible physical condition, its walls cracking, its great Ionic columns supported by two by fours and encased in vines.

But now the town has bought the place. The old gas station on the property and its abandoned gas pumps have been bulldozed away. And now the painters and plasterers are about to swarm all over it, probably beginning this week. Pretty soon, the Hopping House, as a museum, will once again look out across its broad lawn to the monument and, across the street to the old Bull's Head Inn. The migrant workers are gone. The Agway has moved away to Snake Hollow Road and has even changed its name — it's now the Country Gardens store. And the town, festooned with flowers, is home to clothing stores, antique shops, about eight fine restaurants, ice cream stores, a furniture store, even the aforementioned Starbucks. It's gonna be gorgeous when they finish the Hopping project. I can't wait. •

Southampton Village was waiting for a delivery to arrive. She phoned the deliveryman who said he was on Hampton Road, about one mile away. He finally arrived at the store on Main Street an hour later.

Everyday at 4:20, I meet the FedEx truck with my friend Tom (who refers to route 27 as "death's highway"). Twice this summer we have arrived to find the truck nowhere in sight and a sign posted on the drop box — "Pick up early today due to accident in Southampton." Apparently, FedEx learned its lesson. Earlier in the summer, as a result of one of the accidents, the packages from the Hamptons missed the plane at JFK, which is, apparently, a cardinal sin.

The real question is, where is all the traffic coming from and what can be done to make County Road 39 safer? I spoke with Lt. John James of the Southampton Town Police Department who had some interesting insight as to what causes all of the traffic. Not surprisingly, as things tend to go around here, the root of all evil is real estate development. It's not so much the people who come to live in the McMansions, Lt. James says, but rather all of the people in the building trades — carpenters, plumbers, landscapers — who come east to work on the houses.

Another major factor adding to the congestion on 39 is the lack of public transportation on the East End. There is a public bus, but, as Lt. James pointed out, if the bus fills up in Riverhead, the people in Hampton Bays will have to wait for the next bus, which could take up to an hour. No one with a car will put up with the frustration of trying to take buses. Not surprisingly, 75-80% of cars crossing the Shinnecock Canal are single occupancy vehicles.

All of these factors, plus the design of County Road 39, add up to accidents waiting to happen. Lt. James explained that in a location such as Hill Station, for example, there are cars pulling in and out of the Texaco station as well as Hill Station Road, into both the east and west bound lanes. Furthermore, there is no shoulder for drivers to pull into to avoid an accident. And, of course, there is no traffic light or crosswalk, making it almost impossible for a pedestrian to cross from one with wonder, perhaps, at his extraordinary journey gliding across the swimming pool, but not dead.

It must be wonderful to be a cricket. Or this cricket. To have the whole world at your feet. And to be up high, on the very top, able to look down at all you survey. The water glistened. The pool gurgled.

Standing next to my mother, I reached out and waggled an index finger at the cricket. It raised one of its antennas.

"See?" I said.

"How can you see that?" my mother said.

"I'll show you again," I said. And once again I held out my hand and waggled a finger. But this time, the cricket leaped off the exercise ball into the pool. Immediately, it began swimming around hysterically. It was, instinctively, fighting for its life. It was as if being King of the swimming pool had never happened.

"THE CRICKET JUMPED INTO THE POOL," I shouted. My sister got up and ran over.

"What?" my sister shouted.

"He jumped overboard," I said.

"What? Is he crazy?"

"Stupid! Stupid!"

"We've got to save it," she said.

I looked around frantically.

"Dive in after it," she said.

"I'm not going to dive in after it," I said. Then I saw, on a wooden chest on the other side of the pool, a pool net. I began to run toward it.

"Hurry," my sister said. "He's weakening."

I grabbed it. Turned around. Where was it? My sister shouted and pointed at it. "He's starting to swim in a circle," she said. "He's not going to last much longer. And he's about to get caught up in the water jet and shot out into the center. Then we'll NEVER get him. Hurry!"

"I'm hurrying." I ran to where she was, and I was just in time. I scooped the cricket into the net, walked over to the garden and shook him out. He hopped behind a rhododendron. A cricket living to fight another day.

"Is he all right?" mom asked.

* * *

Monday, I returned to the office. Tom Ratcliffe was sitting on his exercise ball. Lise Visser was sitting on her exercise ball. Toniann Esposito was sitting on her exercise ball. I went into the art department, the bookkeeping department, the production department. More than half the office was sitting merrily on exercise balls.

"This is like a 'Seinfeld' episode," I said. Then I retreated upstairs.

In wandering through the office, I had asked everybody I came upon how they liked sitting on their ball. Three people had volunteered that they had almost slipped off their ball. But they'd caught themselves at the last minute.

Now, upstairs at my desk (sitting in a swivel chair), I began to think that perhaps I ought to fashion a memo. People sitting on exercise balls must sign this waiver releasing from liability all the officers of Dan's Papers, Inc., or the corporation itself known as Dan's Papers, Inc. Well, I could write it. But I ought to send a copy of it off to the corporation lawyer before I send it around.

I wonder how the cricket is doing? •

the Morpurgo property as the answer. She said it would not be large enough. (The property is .22 acres.) In her eyes the best plan would be to build a new structure on the property just south of the park and renovate the existing building that would then become an archival space for historical societies both locally and island-wide (such as the Society for the Preservation of Long Island Antiquities).

Ms. Gray added, "The building would also be used for public meetings and exhibits."

When the library announced it intended to move, a number of people who did not want to see it leave its century old location in the historic district formed the John Jermain Future Fund. One of the fund's goals was to raise money to buy the Morpurgo property.

Ms. Gray said, "We wanted to see what would happen with that. But while the library has been waiting, building costs have gone up."

And the minimum price of the Morpurgo property appears double that which the library previously offered. Helga Morpurgo wants it sold for no less than $1.5 million, while Annselm claims she will never sell it to the library. But she is willing to "swap easements with the library." According to Annselm this would lead to "my ability to make condos extremely valuable."

Annselm sees a new structure rising on the Morpurgo property. She has detailed drawings on the web. There can be "trophy condos," a think tank, a museum complex.

But if the library offered her a large amount, would she go for it? "If they offered me ten million dollars I'd sell, but I'd still sue a lot of people." Annselm is currently suing her sister, and various persons connected with library, on the grounds that they are conspiring to pressure her to sell her property at less than its market value. "They're not trying to buy it, they're trying to steal it."

Just how would the Future Fund raise money for this purchase or any other? Gail Slevin of the Fund said they seek philanthropic donations. "The entire budget of the library (which will have been voted on only days before this goes to print) is $750,000." About $20,000 of that comes from outside the tax base that supports the library.

"There are a lot of things people don't realize about the library," said Ms. Slevin. "It's not owned or run by the village. It was established by Mrs. Russell Sage a century ago (she also created Otter Pond and built the high school) and is owned and run by a Board of Trustees. Residents who are in the Sag Harbor School district pay a portion of their Southampton Town tax or East Hampton town tax — Sag Harbor is split between the two towns — for the library."

Helga Morpurgo claims that last year her sister agreed before a judge to sell the property for $1.5 million.

But Annselm Morpurgo says, "I'm the legal owner of this property. I determine if I'm going to sell it and for how much and to whom."

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Sheltered Islander #317 Heracanes and Himacanes

Our poor southeastern states are being pounded by one hurricane after another. So far, the northeast has been lucky just to get the spin off rain. Of course, now that I've said that, one will slam New England...

For years, the National Weather Service named hurricanes after women only. The advent of Women's Liberation changed that tradition to include men's names as well. But why not name hurricanes with a little more attitude?

The first hurricane of the season should be named Hurricane "Already?" To indicate that we just got the kids in school and now we have to have them home so soon?

Followed by Hurricane "BIO" (Bring It On!) indicating that there's really nothing we can't handle.

Hurricane "Clarice," named for a beloved soft-spoken woman who works at Pat & Steve's Restaurant.

Hurricane "Damn, That Was Fun!" Named because most everything that could be blown away was already blown away by the previous three hurricanes and now anything bigger than a bread box blowing by, like a Kayak for example, really is impressive!

Hurricane "Enough Already!" By the fifth hurricane, people are tired of the hurricane alerts interrupting "Wheel of Fortune." It's a big wet wind, yeah, tell us something new... we can read the doppler radar as good as the weather people....

Hurricane "Finders Keepers!" The sixth hurricane really starts packing a punch and you find new things in your yard. This often creates a moral dilemma; should I look for the owner of this item? Or, since hurricanes are officially Acts of G-d, did G-d really want me to have this piano?

Hurricane "GEAR." We get to the "G's" when we are really getting into the hurricane season. The middle of the alphabet hurricanes are often the worst. GEAR stands for Grab Everything And RUN!!!

Hurricane "Holy Moly!" I think the name speaks for itself.

Hurricane "Ay, carumba!" Shelter Island has a large Latin contingent nowadays. "Ay, carumba" is just Spanish for "Holy Moly!"

Hurricane "Just For Fun." Right in the middle of the serious hurricanes, there's always one joker that you get all ready for and it's just a sprinkle.

Hurricane "Kiss Me Kate." Named for a beautiful sloop I saw on the news one year after a hurricane hit New England. Kiss Me Kate had been relocated into somebody's front yard and halfway up their porch. I always wondered if the homeowners would be sad that they lost a porch, or happy that they gained a boat....

Hurricane "Love Long Island or Leave It." The "L" hurricane signals the final call for all those planning to spend the winter in Arizona.

Hurricane "Mother of Mercy, Make it Stop!"

If we've made it to the "M's," we are in deep trouble. The tides will be so high the ferries can pick you up at your door.

Hurricane "NUTS!" Called that because the any other moniker would have to be obscene.

Hurricane "OY VEY!" The name says it all! "OY VEY!" is Yiddish for "NUTS!", "Holy Moly!" and "Ay, carumba!" all put together...

Hurricane "Poi o Poi." By the time we hit the "P's," we're in November, which is monsoon season in the Pacific. If you're gonna have to cope with this much rain, you might as well be in Hawaii....

Hurricane "Q" Named for the omnipotent and annoying character from Star Trek, The Next Generation. "Q" pops up anytime, out of nowhere, careens through your life and leaves you in complete wreckage.

Hurricane "Roger Ebert." If you have lived through this many hurricanes in one season, you are officially a Hurricane Critic and can call the Weather Channel and register your vote to see if this hurricane advances to the next round of competition.

Hurricane "Slow and Sloppy." By the time we get to the "S's" we are just about into winter and sound we can start to worry about ice storms and Nor'easters.

Hurricane "TTFN" named for the internet shorthand, "Ta Ta For Now." We rarely get to a hurricane with a "T" name.

Hurricane "Wendell." You just can't get worked up by a hurricane named Wendell.

Hurricane "X-it." The hurricane season is now exiting on the north wind.

Hurricane "Y?." So named because if we have gotten to a "Y" hurricane we'll be wondering, Why is it showing up now? Doesn't it know it should be an ice storm?

Hurricane "ZZZZZZZZZZZZZZ" So named because the last hurricane in the alphabet should have to be a real snoozer.....

book review: the perfect divorce

By Joe Mintzer

Are you under 40? Then the battleground of Kramer vs. Kramer, where Ted and Joanna fought bitterly over custody of their young boy Billy, is probably terra incognita to you. Unless you yourself are a child of divorced parents, or of parents who talked about divorce, or in retrospect, parents who should have been divorced — maybe somewhere you heard about the hugely successful 1977 novel by Avery Corman that brought the impact of divorce front and center for a whole generation. The book became an Academy Award-winning movie and brought Oscars to director Bob Benton, and to Dustin Hoffman and Meryl Streep.

Now, Avery Corman, who has a home in Water Mill, is back with his seventh novel, picking up, in a sense, where he left off with Kramer vs. Kramer. The characters are different, the setting has changed, but the underlying consequences of dissolved marriages that often, probably most often, create more problems than they solve, are inescapably still present.

In introducing his new book, due to be released this month (Corman read excerpts from galley proofs) the author reminded his audience at Bridgehampton Library's Friday At Five gathering that 50% of today's marriages end in divorce, and as someone later remarked, two-thirds of re-marriages don't succeed. "Look at the smiling faces in the marriage announcements in Sunday's Times," he said, "and you can run an X through half of them — they won't last."

We've come to accept this almost as a norm of our society, he suggested, and wondered why, in the words of one of the many psychologists, attorneys, sociologists, families and individuals he consulted with that there was this "engine of inattention" surrounding the phenomenon. Once, even twenty or thirty years ago, there was a stigma to divorce, and "broken marriages" and "staying together for the sake of the children" were our reference points. We don't hear that language today. Instead, we have the concept of "A Perfect Divorce."

That, to coin a phrase, is an oxymoronic myth. It's like "the perfect storm," a well-defined but enormously destructive force. This reviewer had a friend who kept a brief motto his desk, "Perfect Can't Be," and in sum, this is the message in Avery Corman's story of Tommy, a teenager groomed and curried and primed for success by his overachieving parents, who hits an emotional wall, as Corman called it, in his first year at Brown University. He quits school and turns his back on everything his separated parents had planned for him. It is a story of a failed attempt to soften the impact of a failed marriage, bringing all good intentions to bear to create a pain-free, guilt-free divorce. Instead, the law of unintended consequences kicks in and the blowback reverberations impact everyone in Tommy's life, his divorced parents, their partners, their friends, his friends, his grandparents.

So where does Avery Corman come down on the subject of divorce — probably neither for nor against it, but clearly in favor of therapy first, during, and if need be after, a "whatever works" pragmatic approach to conflict resolution. But he is above all a storyteller, and a very good one at that, not a polemicist, or writer turned advocate for a cause.

It's as a writer that Avery Corman the person, most intrigued the many writers and those who shared the life of their partner writers, sitting in the audience. (We saw Arthur and Barbara Gelb, and Valerie Heller, wife of the late Joe Heller, among those present. Corman paid particular tribute to Joe for inspiring him to become a writer himself.) Knowing their interest in the creative process, Corman described writing "like entering a cocoon." To paraphrase: once the characters are established, the story flows with a life of its own. More than that, he acknowledged a writing truth that he had once rejected — the opening sentences, the first page, "makes" the book and if it doesn't bring the reader in right then and there, the author has lost the precious chance to motivate the reader to read on — is this worth reading, or isn't it? He cited, for example, Joe Heller's never-to-be-forgotten opening words in Catch-22. "It was love at first sight. The first time Yossarian saw the chaplain he fell madly in love with him."

He might also have mentioned Dickens' "It

HIGH SCHOOLS GIRD FOR GRID ACTION

One nice thing to do on a Saturday afternoon in the autumn is go out and sit in the stands in the sunshine to watch the high school kids play football. The varsity games are full of pageantry and fun. Root for the home team. Or root for your team. —DR

East Hampton (2003:6-3)

2004 Schedule

11/5 E.H. at Sayville, 2 p.m.

In 2003, the East Hampton Bonackers had a great season and qualified for the playoffs. Miller is quarterback again this year, and Dayton is the main receiver.

2004 Schedule

9/14 Westhampton 39, Bayport 0

10/30 Westhampton at Mr. Sinai, 1:30 p.m.
11/6 McGann-Marcy at Westhampton, 2 p.m.

side to the other.

Southampton Town Officials are currently discussing the options regarding 39. Ideally, the road will be made into a four-lane highway, which would help to alleviate some traffic. Along with a fourth lane would come a landscaped median, making it impossible to drive straight across the road and make a left hand turn, except at certain designated points. The town is also looking into building another highway alongside the railroad tracks.

Of course, the completion, not to mention the beginning, of such a project could be five to ten years away. Until then, unfortunately, there don't seem to be any short-term solutions to the danger that County Road 39 poses. Perhaps the fatalities and near-fatalities will be a wake up call for drivers to pay more attention. But, if you're planning to drive with extra caution anywhere, 39 is the place to do it.

Greenport's Men Of The Sea

During the Maritime Festival held in Greenport last weekend, Angela Orrell's photographic documentary, Greenport's Men of The Sea, a profile of North Fork commercial fishermen, was featured at the Icehouse Gallery. The documentary profiled working and recently retired fisherman and also featured a film, comprised of edited clips and video taken by the fishermen themselves from about late 50s to the present.

Orrell hopes to generate interest in this project and hopes to retain the images and stories of these men before they and their work someday completely disappear.

Last summer, Orrell opened the first of what she hopes will be an ongoing series of the stories and photographs of the fishermen of the North Fork at Greenport's East End Seaport Museum. In this continuing series, Orrell hopes to capture and reflect the challenges these men and women – a "dying breed" in her words – continue to face. Her concept is of a shared vision between the fishermen and those involved in this project.

"The documentary, Greenport's Men of the Sea, now includes the last of the North Fork fisherman," says Orrell. "Many of the intelligent, articulate men who shared their life experiences with me could not do anything else. As one captain said, 'We are doing a job most people can't.' Some of the captains were somehow genetically predisposed, and generations before theirs had broken the waves and destiny spoke. They couldn't pretend to be someone they're not. Pretentiousness doesn't apply here, just a genuine quality that revived and inspired me." —S.W.S.

What's New On Love Lane: Mint

Fashionable Boutique Brings Metro Style To Mattituck's Main Street

By Karen Lund

Mattituck's Love Lane has been spiced up with the opening of a dazzling new boutique, Mint. The minty green walls and refreshing smile of the owner, Joanna Mazzella, make Mint a North Fork destination spot whether you're on a shopping spree for that one special outfit or out for a visit to the vineyards on a weekend. The liveliness of the store beckons you to browse through the racks that are filled with fashions that appeal to women of all ages. Some unique items that can be found include Kai Bath and Body products and jewelry by local artisan Jeanne Ruland, as well as shoes and handbags.

Mint opened on Memorial Day weekend and has enjoyed a busy summer. Joanna had the pleasure of serving a varied clientele including mothers and daughters, weekend visitors and business women. The shop has been designed to serve women of all ages and needs, with a varied fashion line. Joanna's goal is to bring fashion through one-of-a-kind outfits to the women of the North Fork.

"I'm overwhelmed with the great, response I've had from the community. This experience has exceeded all my expectations," Joanna exclaimed during a recent visit.

Mint offers its customers fashion lines that range from the informal to the formal. Contemporary sportswear by Trina Turk, Nanette LePore, In the Now, Theory and Liquid can be found in its racks. Dresses by Shoshanna (nee Lonstein) and Nicole Miller address the needs of both formal and informal occasions. Citizens of Humanity, Joe's Jeans and Vitamina address the needs of women who are shopping for designer denim. Add one-of-a-kind necklaces and earrings

Fashion Institute. There she took classes and heard top designers speak and act as mentors. Needless to say, the study of law was a thing of the past. Joanna recognized that her creative energies would be well spent in the fashion industry. She went on to earn degrees from the Fashion Institute of Technology (FIT) in Fashion Design and International Trade and Marketing for the Fashion Industries. She used her new skills as a fashion buyer in New York City for several years.

This proud owner credits her success to being in tune with the needs of the women of the North Fork as well as the support of her family and friends. Recently married to owner of the Red Door restaurant, Stephan Mazzella, the couple has bought a house in Southold. She and her husband found Love Lane to be a magical spot on their visits to the North Fork. After cajoling and working with her landlord, Mrs. Mazzella took several months to transform some commercial space into a fresh and vibrant shop.

In addition to operating Mint, Joanna plans to start her own line of clothing in the near future.

"With my great start here on Love Lane, I hope to open other stores on the North Fork," she revealed. Using the connotation of "mint" as "refreshing and new," she named her shop with the hope that she could provide a unique fashion experience to North Fork women, and she has clearly succeeded with a boutique that is decidedly "mint"!

by Jeanne Ruland, a small clutch and sandals by Mystique and you have a complete new outfit.

With hard work, determination and a vision, Joanna has fulfilled her dream of opening a boutique that would introduce fashion lines to a wide spectrum of women. After enrolling at Northeastern as a pre-law student, she had the opportunity to spend some time at the Paris

The Clubhouse at Indian Island. Along the pretty Peconic River at Indian Island Golf Course, this restaurant offers quality cooking at realistic prices convenient to diners from both forks. New proprietor Russ Moran transformed a drab dining room to one of warmth and comfort with soft lighting and smartly laid tables. His eclectic menu features the gently pan-fried oysters and clams on the half shell, which you'd swear were just plucked from the bay. French onion soup is deep in flavor. L.I. duck in a pepper cherry sauce and calves liver with bacon & onions were tasty and will leave no one hungry.

Riverside Drive & Route 105, Riverhead. 727-0788. Entrees, $11.95-$16.95. (Bradbrook, 4/16/04.)

Cooperage Inn. With a beautiful new look emphasizing the cooperage theme, this charmer continues to carry the banner of North Fork cuisine. Chef/owner Jonathan Perkins, along with chefs Laimo and Hegeman, produce inspired appetizers such as rare sesame tuna carpaccio and pan-seared fresh mozzarella, and don't miss the sesame crusted calamari served over field greens with a soy vinaigrette. Steaks are steakhouse worthy, and the riga-

Ile de Beaute. In a beautiful old house with courtyard tables, the spirit of Provence is alive in Greenport with highly authentic French cuisine. Its treatment of classics like escargots, French onion soup, and frogs' legs runs the gamut from superb to extraordinary. Rack of lamb, served with rosemary sauce reduction, is masterly. Desserts are tasty and the crepe options are best expressed in exponential notation. Service is deliberate but attentive. Entrees $24-35. 314 Main Street, Greenport. (Bradbrook, 7/12/02). [C,H,J]

La Cuvee Wine Bar & Bistro at the Greenporter Hotel. Gourmet bistro dining adjoining a hip boutique hotel footsteps from Greenport's vibrant downtown. The casually upscale dining room creates a pleasing environment for a light and adventurous menu. Seafood appetizers like tuna tartar and the sublime mussels in coconut and lemongrass broth bear an unmistakable Asian influence. But executive chef/owner Deborah Rivera's culinary artistry really announces itself when the entrees arrive. Long Island duck in an orange-infused coconut sauce is impressive enough, but topped by her otherworldly Chilean Sea Bass poached in a miso-sesame broth. Exceptional wine list, with by-the-glass offering many pleasant surprises. Entrees, $21-$26. 326 Front Street, Greenport. 477-0066. (Bradbrook, 4/25/03). [B,Wi]

toni ala vodka continues to dazzle. Fish here is always pristine and cooked with a light hand. Entrees $15.50-$30. 2218 Sound Ave. Baiting Hollow. 727-8994. (Simm, 1/10/03). [Br,D]

Desmond's Pub & Restaurant at the Inn at East Wind. The North Fork's new destination hotel hosts an elegant and restful dining room serving excellent a la carte dishes and classic pub fare. Executive chef Richard Laurelli's daily specials are consistent standouts, as evidenced by his chilled vegetable soup with lobster meat, as well as the Andalusia-style beef and chicken tapas. Pub favorites like crisply battered cod and chips hit the mark and familiar entrees like grilled lamb chops are perfectly prepared. The wine list is sensibly priced, though short on local vintages. Blueberry creme brulee was an inventive and winning update on a classic dessert. Entrees, $16-$26. 5720 Rt. 25A, Wading River. 929-3500. (Bradbrook, 8/29/03). (Pu)

Do Little's. An oasis of relaxation in the North Fork's busiest shopping center. For eight years co-owner Donielle Cardinale's restaurant has provided the comforts of customer-friendly, large-portion cooking with panache. The burgers, quiches and salads are consistently good and chicken and pasta entrees often sparkle. Mussel enthusiasts thrill to their preparation in a flavorful Thai garlic sauce. Daily specials often feature inspired ingredient combinations and the fish of the day almost guarantees a creative coupling. Desserts are in transition and the wine list limited, but for comfort food with a flair, it's hard to outdo DoLittle's. Rt. 25, Mattituck Plaza,

La Plage. A glowing beacon along the Sound coast for sophisticated diners. The stellar reputation of chef/proprietor Wayne Wadington derives from cutting-edge combinations of difficult-to-secure ingredients. His creations fly off the menu as quickly as off the plate, but if you have the chance try the lightly seared scallops with blue crab mille feuille in a kaffir lime / sweet pea sauce or yellow fin tuna paired with chorizo sausage and butternut squash. Desserts range from decadent (chocolate cake with an espresso mousse) to delicate (Tahitian vanilla creme brulee). All are mind boggling. Top wine list, too. Entrees $22-33. 131 Creek Road, Wading River. 744-9200. (Bradbrook, 2/04). [Ap,Ch]

Modern Snack Bar. Home-cooked meals away from home await you at this charming family-run restaurant operating since 1950. Wittmeier brothers' time-honored menu contains dishes too good to go out of style. Delectable sauerbraten is perfectly tender and the stuffed cabbage very good. Duck breast salad, recently introduced, is another winner. Crab cakes and lobster salad are real treats, but the big surprise is the world-class shrimp and crabmeat quiche. Home-baked desserts are splendid and their take-out pie business is brisk. Wines are mostly limited to local vintages. Reservations not needed, but day or night, it's always a crowded house. Entrees, $9-$17. Rt. 25 Aquebogue. 722-3655. (Bradbrook, 10/4/02). [T]

North Fork ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

"STRICTLY STRUCTURES" AT EAST END ARTS COUNCIL

There is something about a photography exhibit that's a welcomed relief, at least for this critic. The standard of measurement is definable and discernable, that measurement being reality. How does the photographic image reflect or distort real life? As with any art criticism, however, there's always the important question of meaning and how that meaning is produced.

It appears that meaning is connected (or not connected) to reality in the current photography show at Riverhead's East End Arts Council. As curated by Tulla Booth, the selected images each represent a particular view of life which is primarily a distorted one. Such distortion evokes a continuum from Impressionism to Expressionism: most pieces are expressionistic, however.

One exception is Pat Field's impressionistic, iconic Plaza Hotel, taken from a perspective which is at once disorienting and familiar. At first, we don't recognize the building until we realize that the foregrounded horse signifies the horse and buggies situated in the Plaza Hotel Square. The image also conjures up a sense of nostalgia which is quite powerful.

The prevailing style of Expressionism comes in many diverse forms. Kathleen Bifulco's "Fort Lauderdale" features an old Texaco gas station (a nod to nostalgia, like Ms. Field's picture).

Its Expressionism is the contrast between bright colors and lighting. Other photographs use high contrast as well, but light and shadows account for this effect. Outstanding among the images include Richard Mizdal's windows and doors in "Brookfield Entrance."

The employment of oblique angles is another expressionistic technique contributing contrast and malformation, like the arresting worm's-eye view of reality seen in Mr. Mizdal's "Vermont Clerestory" and Michael Knigin's "Puerto Rican Church."

Pat D'Aversa's "Herald Square Reflection" reinforces deformity in its mirror image of two buildings, a phenomenon that never fails to amaze people who are fascinated by Manhattan skyscrapers.

Juxtaposition of lines as a distorting and opposing composition is present in many photographs but one favorite is William Grabowski's "At Liberty's Door."

Finally, while Jay Hoops' digital photos are more impressionistic, the distortion comes from juxtaposition of images, not lines. Such distortions give a spiritual quality to Ms. Hoops' pieces and allow us to remember how much she will be missed. (The exhibition is dedicated to Ms. Hoops who passed away this year.)

"Strictly Structures" will be on view until October 10.

influenced American regional menu always offers a panoply of pastas as well as meat and fish dishes. Perhaps their winningest recipe occurred by accident. Ask genial chef/owner Stephen Mazzella for the story behind his remarkable porterhouse pork chop with honey, capers and cayenne. A true instance of luck being the residue of design! Dessert lovers have their vocabulary stretched by such wonders as raspberry crème brulee and Godiva chocolate cake with Tahitian vanilla bean ice cream. Ample wine list. Entrees - $16-$28. 13560 Main Rd., Mattituck. 298-4800. (Trueman-Honey, 12/03). [D]

Scrimshaw. Chef/co-owner Rosa Ross, whose culinary credentials are carved in many a menu from Hong Kong to Italy to Manhattan, brings her latest invention to Greenport. Nestled at the end of Preston's Dock, there are dazzling views of Shelter Island. The slightly crammed dining room is made intimate and warm by sophisticated lighting and subdued music. The menu is full of interesting tastes, starting with excellent duck confit-stuffed spring rolls and hearty fish chowder. Especially good among the eclectic entrees are tamarind lamb shanks with lemon risotto and the supremely comforting seafood in a sweet, tangy kaffir lime coconut broth. Interesting wine list. Preston's Dock (at end of Main Street), Greenport. 477-8882. (Simm, 06/04).

Stonewall's. Haute cuisine in a tranquil setting, at the Woods Course at Cherry Creek in Riverhead. Step into the warm and inviting dining room, however, and your thoughts will happily shift from golf course to main course. Many superb entrees, including the delicate halibut in a mustard-nut crust, are worth savoring long after the meal has concluded. Duck à l'orange on a bed of wild rice is another standout as is the deeply flavorful lobster bisque. Rigatoni with roasted tomatoes, mozzarella, capers and olives is exquisitely al dente. Fine wines and creatively fruity desserts complete a dining experience par excellence. Entrees $15-$27. 967 Reeves Ave., Riverhead. 506-0777. (Bradbrook, 9/12/03). [Lu,N]

Touch of Venice. Top-notch Italian cuisine in a delightful setting on Mattituck Inlet. Named appropriately for location, cuisine and a large mural dominating the dining room, this is family dining par excellence with a sophisticated ambience. Among the kitchen's highlights: Orient Point oysters, chilled but not icy; baby spinach salad with gorgonzola; black angus porterhouse. Manicotti in a fresh, simple tomato sauce is among the many pleasing pasta dishes. Lobster Meat over angel hair pasta, a frequent special, is an exciting dish of imaginative complexity and one of the North Fork's perennial favorites. Cold seafood bruschetta is another special to watch for. Entrees $16-$34. Wickham Avenue at Matt-A-Mar Marina, Mattituck. 298-5851. (Bradbrook, 8/16/02). [L,O]

Tuscan House. Your table is yours for the evening at this elegant, upscale Italian. Authentic, classical dishes bear the deft touch of chef William Oster. His fish is exceptionally fresh and his osso bucco masterly. But his virtuosity lies in the care with which he pairs his 16 pastas and his sublime sauces. The results range from delicate to intense. Pappardelle with a puree of beans dressed with sopresata, fresh chilies, garlic and parmigiano reggiano is typically adventurous and winning. The dessert tray is filled with excellent choices. Well-chosen wines, emphasis on regional Italians. 673 Osborn Ave., Riverhead. 727-2330. (Bradbrook, 9/7/01). [C,I,P]

Tweed's. Owner Ed Tuccio parlayed his interests in history, Americana and the bison to create this unique eatery. The décor puts one in mind of an expensive turn-of-the-century men's club, but with a romantic twist. Notable appetizers include Oysters Portland, enveloped in sautéed leeks and crisp bacon, and the Bistro Salad, redolent of blue cheese and roasted beets. Aside from Tweed's excellent specialty of the house, succulent farm-raised bison, also recommended are the Sashimi Sesame Tuna, carb-free vegetable lasagna, and Duck Two Ways. Don't skip dessert: the pastry chef is a graduate of the Cordon Bleu in London.

Entrees $19-26. 17 E. Main St., Riverhead. 208-3151. (Trueman-Honey, 7/04/03). [St].

was the best of times. It was the worst of times." Corman read his opening to A Perfect Divorce and while it didn't quite measure up to the standard he had set — it may read better than it sounded as he read it — it was admittedly a very high bar he had chosen.

Finally, what inspired A Perfect Divorce? Avery and Judy have been happily married for more than thirty years. He claims the story is fictional, but in hedging somewhat that the book is autobiographical, there was no doubt that the emotional strains sprang from his memory of his parents' divorce, a rare and almost taboo occurrence in the Bronx apartment house culture in which he grew up. He then conceded in an almost throw away comment that that experience might have been his "Rosebud" — remember Orson Welles in Citizen Kane — and indeed the sled of his childhood that somehow was the unspoken driving force in his life.

Avery Corman was introduced by old friend and talk radio host Joan Hamburg who had interviewed him on her show that Friday morning. She said that this book "will make you laugh, make you cry and if you're angry with your partner, it will make you re-think everything." Well, decide that for yourself. But in any event, it's clear that A Perfect Divorce will make a good early Fall read. And if your marriage seems to be heading for the rocks — perhaps it will at least slow you down.

ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

BUTLER AND WULFF AT MERZ; ROSSO AT BANK OF NY

This critic has followed Michael Butler's art career for several years now, ever since, in fact, he appeared on the cover of Dan's Papers (circa: the early days). If truth be told, it was initially because Mr. Butler committed himself to autobiography in clear, succinct ways: subject and style blended in an equally concise manner.

Thus, Mr. Butler's depiction of his multicultural background and his folk art style became an aesthetic statement. This statement was personal, never political, as far as we were concerned.

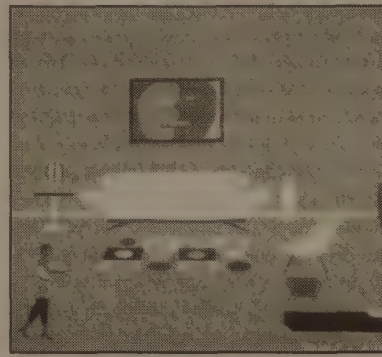

Mr. Butler's current show at Sag Harbor's Merz Gallery may have taken a new direction, however. There's a narrative thrust we don't remember in previous works, revolving around family life. More importantly, there's a new cast of characters. Most of the primary figures are now female and more specifically, mothers.

These mothers are limited to domestic duties

("Shabop Shaboom") or playing with their children ("A Forgotten Moment"). It's easy to perceive the images as political ones, a comment on middle class life and its restrictions. On second thought, the work may be more about Mr. Butler's own mother.

Even so, there's another image that is more precisely political: two halves of a face, each one a different shade of brown. It's a subtle configuration, appearing as a picture on the wall in a living room scene. Is it meant to signify Mr. Butler's "split" identity?

Work by Vickie Wulff is also at the Merz, adding a different perspective to autobiography. Ms. Wulff's mostly abstract pieces capture her memories of foreign places, like Rome. As such, they are exotic and non-representational, unlike Mr. Butler's art.

"Shabop-Shaboom," by Michael Butler

Not only does Ms. Wulff show a flair for capturing ambiance, but it's also apparent that her memories have meant a lot to her over the years. We can also experience these memories with her.

Marie Rosso's paintings at East Hampton's Bank of New York are similarly abstract, also featuring her own particular memories. Such recollections primarily capture Ms. Rosso's everyday environment evolving around the local waterways. Thus, her blue/green colors and circular shapes evoke a peacefulness and serenity that both Ms. Rosso and her viewers can appreciate.

Mr. Butler's and Ms. Wulff's work can be seen at the Merz Gallery until Oct. 3. Ms. Rosso's show will be on view at East Hampton's Bank of New York until the end of September.

HONORING THE ARTIST: KURT VONNEGUT

Famed author and part-time East End resident Kurt Vonnegut has been described in diverse ways through the years. Jay McInerney is perhaps most succinct when he says Mr. Vonnegut is a "satirist with a heart" and a "cynic who wants to believe."

While we can certainly understand why words like "cynic" and "satirist" apply to the man who wrote Slaughterhouse-Five, we would characterize him in other ways. For example, Elaine Benson Gallery's Kimberly Goff, who is Mr. Vonnegut's art dealer, puts it simply: "He's incredibly loving."

Rather than the man whose subjects have "always been about doomsday," according to author John Irving, we have, instead, a man who stands in the midst of a field filled with sunflowers gracing his 1991 autobiography, Fates Worse Than Death. This doesn't sound like someone who's a cynic.

A recent conversation with Mr. Vonnegut reinforces this impression. Although he's not one to waste words or repeat himself, his message is clear: "Practice art, no matter if it's no good. It will make your soul grow."

We're somewhat surprised to know that the kind of art Mr. Vonnegut is talking about is not writing, but the visual arts. He's been painting and drawing now for a number of years, and more particularly, transforming his work into silkscreen prints.

Motivated by his business partner/silkscreen producer, Joe Petro III, Mr. Vonnegut doesn't go far afield when selecting subject matter. Many pieces are inspired by his books, like Cat's Cradle, where a self-portrait has been incorporated into an ad for Absolut Vodka.

Vonnegut, drawing

Another work turned into a print is a tribute to Saul Steinberg, an artist Mr. Vonnegut especially respects for his images' ability to affect non-English speaking people during World War II. Mr. Vonnegut has created four hands, with little faces drawn on each of them. What's unique about the work is the accompanying poem and its tag line: "We like some works by some artists who could not do what Michelangelo could do but who dared make pictures anyway."

According to Ms. Goff, Mr. Vonnegut has even created a sculpture, "Wasp Waste," a small black figure made of cut aluminum. We can't help but recall that his older sister was a sculptor. (Mr. Vonnegut's father was not only an architect but an artist as well.)

Asked about how his writing may have influenced his art, Mr. Vonnegut mentions the aspect of discipline, adding that he's become more disciplined since being involved with silkscreening. He also quickly notes that his silkscreens use a particular method of shading one color into another that's never been employed before.

Lest we think that Mr. Vonnegut has stopped writing his pithy commentary on the human condition, he reminds us that he writes weekly for the Chicago-based In These Times. And when he's not writing or creating art, he might be doing crossword puzzles or reading what he calls "old books," like Democracy in America.

Questioned as to what he'd really like to try that he's never done before, Mr. Vonnegut answers without hesitation, "skateboarding," before admitting he's really kidding.

Why do we have the feeling that he may not be kidding? Anything to make your soul grow.

—Marion Wolberg Weiss

Kykuit – The Rockefeller Estate

We live in an area rich with history – natural, cultural, political, and artistic. And we are so accessible to another area of great importance: The Hudson River Valley has been host to some of the most prominent Americans over the years. And what name is more commanding, more proud, than Rockefeller? John D Rockefeller was one of the great American entrepreneurs, capitalizing on the oil refining business in the 1800s. He was also a philanthropist who donated hundreds of millions of dollars to various beneficiaries. The generations of Rockefellers that followed included economists, businesspeople, and politicians. And four generations of these powerhouses laid their heads to rest in their "humble" home, Kykuit.

Once the playground of one of the most renowned families in American history, Kykuit is now a historic site of the National Trust, nestled in the town of Sleepy Hollow.

Completed in 1913, Kykuit boasts gorgeous views of the Hudson River. The terracing and landscaping is intricate and beautiful, from the stonework to the formal gardens to the fountains. The gardens also display magnificent 20th century sculpture. Inside, visitors can see the vast collection of Governor Nelson A Rockefeller, the third son of John D Rockefeller, who was Vice President to Gerald Ford. Nelson became interested in art during his time at Dartmouth College. He majored in economics but became fascinated with the arts, particularly photography. During his breaks and after graduation, Nelson went on tours of art galleries with his mother, who was an avid collector herself. Nelson began his collection, which became among the most impressive private art displays in the world, featuring works by Picasso, Miro, and Matisse. Kykuit still has on display a large portion of Nelson's art collection, including striking tapestries by Picasso, and works by Henry Moore, Isamu Noguchi, Louise Nevelson, and Alexander Calder.

We can now see this incredible estate with our own eyes; we can walk through the gardens and imagine what it might have been like to live the life of one of the great American entrepreneurs. And what better time to take it all in than the fall, when the leaves are losing their green pigment in a brilliant display of oranges and reds?

Kykuit

The foliage is turning, and the Rockefeller estate, with all its trees and gardens, is a premier place to take it all in.

The mansion itself is also accessible. There are fascinating art collections gracing the rooms, along with some of the finest furniture in the world. The Rockefellers were also intrigued by Chinese ceramics, and there is an impressive selection. Horse drawn vehicles and classic automobiles fill the coach barn.

If you want to visit Kykuit, there are several ways in which to view the premises. There is a House and Inner Garden Tour, a Gardens and Sculpture Tour, a Grand Tour, and an Estate Life Tour. But this week, there is a fabulous tour leaving right from Southampton and sponsored by the Parrish Art Museum. The Museum offers four day-long Regional Art Tours annually to New York City and surrounding areas. These trips include special tours of artistic venues as well as fine dining experiences.

On Thursday, September 30, the museum will offer a day-long excursion. Participants will meet at 8 a.m. in the Southampton Village Parking lot behind the Museum or at 8:30 a.m. in the Riverhead TJ Maxx parking lot. The trip will include a tour of the house, the art galleries, the coach barn, and the inner gardens. There will be a gourmet boxed lunch provided at Kykuit's café. The trip costs $100 for members of the Parrish, and $120 for non-members. The cost includes transportation, admission and tours, lunch, and snacks. Kykuit is wheelchair accessible. The buses will depart Kykuit at 4:30 p.m. For more information or to reserve a space on the Parrish Museum's tour of Kykuit, call Amanda Pilletere at 283-2118 ext. 45.

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood in The Hamptons

Sorry Wrong Number, Kim! Kim Basinger's recent film, Cellular, is a thriller without hang-ups except for the outrageous implausibility of just about everything in it. On the plus side, the movie is deftly directed with an honest B Movie flair – you are given a lot of bang for the buck so, who gives a hoot for content. Ms. Basinger gives the expected superior performance as she assumes the prestigious mantle that covered Barbara Stanwyck on film and, before her, Agnes Moorehead on radio. They were swamped with applause, cheers, kudos and awards as a woman in dire peril on a phone for the entire story seeking help. That was Sorry, Wrong Number written for radio and, later as a movie by Lucille Fletcher. Fortunately, Kim Basinger has her work in The Door In The Floor as a bid for another Oscar.

The victim in Cellular is first seen looking gorgeous (how could Ms. Basinger not?) She's in your basic black dress and sunglasses. She is taking her son to his school bus, their brief words tell us she's a science teacher and, somehow you know something awful is pending. Hardly any sooner than she re-enters her fabulous Brentwood home (I've warned you about improbabilities) goons break into the kitchen, kill the maid and snatch Kim. She is taken to a house in the remote L.A. hills. There, she's stored in the attic where, among the antiques (not Kim, certainly) there is an old rotary phone. It could be trouble, so Ethan (yes, improbable) the Kim-napper smashes it with a sledge hammer. Little did he know he was holding hostage a science teacher. Soooo, manipulating a couple' mangled wires she's able to make a call and lo' and get hold! she reaches Chris Evans' cell phone. Chris is a Beach Boy surfer who enjoys watching Baywatch babes but, he's willing to put it on hold while he's helping her. If he thought it to be a snap – forget about it. But, hey, let's face it – what better does he have to do? Now, after mayhem and brutal murder plus a kidnapping and, let's not forget the unfeeling destruction of a good old rotary phone – a much less treacherous instrument than the cellular. Now on top of all that we have a marathon car chase.

Well, there you go, how in the world do you suppose the cell phone will perform during hours of careening through and against traffic, dealing with L.A. drivers and a deficient L.A. police force? Can Chris stay on the line long enough through a Collateral kind of journey to L.A.'s west side, the international Airport and so on, while contending with Angeleno drivers including (oh, my gosh) a lawyer! The run down police are exemplified by Sgt. William H. Macy, a tired veteran cop who's been beaten down by his beat, and his wife. His wry, very droll performance is typical of the movie's jokey satire that propels the film faster than the cars borrowed and stolen by Chris to save the lovely Kim. Chris Evans' wacky, don't give a damn persistence quickens the already short (89 minutes) length of Cellular. There's the film's success and it owes it to director David R. Ellis (Final Destination 2) whose fancy footwork moves so agilely you hardly notice the holes in his tap shoes and plot.

Oh boy! Reviewing another Kim Basinger film makes me really feel I'm home. Kiss-Kiss. Bang-Bang. Hello? Hello???

ED KOCH Goes To THE MOVIES

Two years ago I reviewed the sensational Argentinean film Nine Queens, on which Criminal is based. In my review I stated, "This is an intriguing movie from the first frame to the last."

Regrettably, Criminal is a distant second in both acting and execution. John C. Reilly and Maggie Gyllenhaal are brilliant actors. Unfortunately, in this film they seem uncomfortable in their roles and give very ordinary perform-

This well-done docudrama is a fictionalized account of a true incident that took place in Berlin.

The movie opens on the Upper West Side of Manhattan where a Jewish family is sitting Shiva (period of mourning). The deceased's wife, Ruth (Jutta Lampe), is shown covering the mirrors in the house with cloths, and her observance of such Orthodox rituals surprises her children.

The film shifts back and forth to Germany under the Nazis at about the time of the battle for Stalingrad. Orders were issued in Berlin to round up and ship to concentration camps the Jewish spouses of non-Jewish Germans; referred to by the Nazis as ances. On the other hand, Diego Luna gives an excellent performance.

The plot is devoted to numerous scams primarily carried out by Richard (John C. Reilly) and Rodrigo (Diego Luna). Rodrigo was a loner plying his trade in relatively minor scams involving small amounts of money. He later joins Richard in a scam involving a forged document with the value of $750,000. Valerie (Maggie Gyllenhaal), who is Richard's sister, is also cast as sexually attracted to Rodrigo. But since she looks old enough to be his mother, it doesn't work.

The half-dozen scams pulled off by various con artists make this a pleasant film to watch, but for real excitement, rent Nine Queens. It is so far superior to the American version of the same script.

Rosenstrasse (+)

Aryans. Most of the film deals with the Christian women who, with great courage, stood in front of the building where their husbands were incarcerated demanding their release, even when soldiers with machine guns were posted in front of the crowd.

Ruth's daughter, Hannah (Maria Schrader), is engaged to a non-Jew, and Ruth has made it clear that she opposes the marriage. Hannah, wanting to learn about her mother's past and understand why she is so hostile toward her Christian fiancé, travels to Berlin. She interviews one of the Christian women, Lena (Katja Riemann), who at great personal cost, did what she could to save her Jewish husband, Fabian (Martin Feifel), from certain death.

The roles are beautifully played. While the script lends itself to melodrama, it never goes that route. Nevertheless, it will and certainly should evoke tears. It is worth seeing this film, especially during this period of Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur, to help us count our blessings in this country and reflect on the current rising tide of anti-Semitism throughout Europe.

Entertainment In The Hamptons

preview: red herring...by jan silver

We now live in a politically polarized nation with the added threat of terrorism constantly hanging over us. This is, at the very least, psychologically unsettling. How do we cope with this added tension and stress in our daily lives? Attending a funny play is one outlet for tension. Laughter can be a great valve for blowing off steam.

Jonathan Peters, artistic director of the local professional theater group Spindletop Productions, has an affinity for comedy. He discovered Red Herring, written in 2000 by Michael Hollinger, while searching for new work to stage here. Peters asked Naked Stage, the informal, local theater cooperative, to do a reading of the play. The group did it and the farce was well-received by both actors and audience, so Peters decided to stage a full production.

Red Herring takes place in 1952 when the U.S. is living under the threat of the H-bomb, McCarthyism's anti-Communist "Red Scare" tactics are rampant, and the optimistic political campaign of "I Like Ike," Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, is underway. These contradictory circumstances provide fertile ground for poking fun.

Playwright Hollinger sets up Red Herring in 1950s B-movie black (noir) comedy/thriller style. His lead characters are a wise-cracking detective, a Russian spy, a prominent Senator's daughter, a dead fisherman, and a box of Velveeta cheese. The plot twists and turns through romance, suspense and mystery – often evoked through deadpan humor and absurd circumstances.

Manhattan actor/director (and part-time East Hamptonite) Michael Nathanson shepherds the cast of professional actors David Bartlett, Marshall Corbero, William Cullinan, Tina Jones, Helen Mendes and Ali Squitieri in this production. Brian Leaver designed the set, which is like a large jigsaw puzzle maneuvered onstage with the curtain open. Teresa Lebrun devised the many costumes for each actor, who play several parts. Sebastian Paczynski did the lighting, Joe Marchese is the sound designer and Judy Militare is the production's stage manager.

Playwright Michael Hollinger, an assistant professor of theater at Villanova University, has had many plays and television scripts produced. Red Herring received the Barrymore Award for best new play in 2000 and it premiered the same year at Philadelphia's Arden Theatre Company.

Red Herring just opened at Guild Hall's John Drew Theater, East Hampton. It plays Thursday through Saturday evenings at 8 p.m. and Sundays at 4 p.m. through October 10. Tickets are $20 for all performances. There is a dinner/theater package with the Farmhouse Restaurant for $45 (not including tax and gratuity). Tickets and the dinner/theater package are sold through Theatermania at 1-866-811-4111 (www.theatermania.com) or tickets only can be purchased at the John Drew Theater box office before the performance.

Spindletop Productions is designating several benefit nights for local organizations. All proceeds from tonight's performance, September 24, go to the Children's Museum of the East End. Tomorrow evening's performance benefits the preschool program at the Child Development Center of the Hamptons. Mayer & Company CPA's March to Fight Breast Cancer is the beneficiary on October 1, Southampton Hospital on October 2, The Retreat on October 8 and East End Hospice on October 9.

All nonprofit organizations need underwriting sponsors to help defray costs. Dan's Papers, Washington Mutual Home Loan Co., Hamptons Gym Corporation, Plum Hamptons TV (Channel 18) and WEHM-FM (92.9) are participating sponsors for Red Herring.

Spindletop Productions' Jonathan Peters hopes Red Herring can provide some comic relief to East End audiences trying to cope with the current national and international political climate.

Away At School... By David Lion Rattiner

Book Signing With Paris Hilton

Last weekend Paris Hilton and I had a book signing event together at Dan's Papers in Bridgehampton. For those of you who do not know, I wrote a book called Away at School and it is about my freshman year at Northeastern University. The book is for sale at the Northeastern University bookstore and also at Dan's Papers. Paris Hilton recently wrote a book called Confessions of an Heiress and it is for sale in bookstores all across the country.

It was kind of weird how it all happened. I was in Boston walking to class when my cell phone rang, registering an unlisted number on the caller ID. I considered not answering the phone because I thought that it might be one of my many female stalkers, but I decided that I would just go for it. I was in a mood where I needed some attention. A stalker might do me some good.

"Hello?" I said in my most curious voice.

"Hello, is this Dave Rattiner, the columnist from Dan's Papers?" I was flattered by this hello.

"Why, yes it is. Can I ask who is calling?"

"Oh my God, I can't believe I'm finally getting to talk to you." Yep, another stalker. "Hi David, oh I'm excited, hi, yes. Hi, this is Paris Hilton calling and I was wondering if you would be willing to do a book signing with me out in the Hamptons this weekend."

Paris Hilton?

"Paris Hilton?"

"Yes."

"You wrote a book?"

"Yes."

"Cool."

"Thank you."

"Yes, of course I'd do a book signing with you."

Let's do it on Saturday at the Dan's Papers office in Bridgehampton at noon time. That would be fine for me."

"Can we make it at one o'clock? I'm coming home from St. Tropez on Friday and I'm going to be tired."

"That's fine. I'll see you then."

I got off of my cell phone and looked around. Suddenly, everything felt really weird. I didn't really think that going to class was such a good idea now that I had to prepare for a book signing with Paris Hilton and everything. I went to class anyway, however. I made arrangements to come home from Boston on the Hampton Jitney, and met up with Paris Hilton on Saturday afternoon.

It was a really nice Saturday, the weather was great, the air had that crispness that makes you feel good inside. I was setting up the table outside and some chairs when around 1:30 or so a large limousine followed by a giant, black Hummer H2 pulled up in front of the office. Loud techno music was coming from both vehicles. Once they parked a Ferrari and a Mercedes AMG pulled up alongside the Hummer, the drivers had a conversation with and then pulled into the Dan's Papers parking lot. I was hoping they wouldn't see the sign that read "Any vehicle blocking this driveway for more than one minute becomes property of Dan's Papers."

Out of the limo strutted Paris Hilton. We shook hands and I offered her a chair at the table. A camera crew was setting up while news van after news van started pulling up to the office. Within fifteen minutes of Paris's arrival, an entire line of people started to show up, from teenage girls to grown men. All of them wanted to buy a copy of our book.

It was all very exciting. People were snapping pictures like crazy and there was question after question: Are you going to go on a book tour together? What made you write a book? What do you think about the war in Iraq? What is next for Dave Rattiner and Paris Hilton? Are you going to write a book together?

It was all very frustrating. After about three hours of signing books Paris and I went to an after book party. I opted to leave early, because I was getting really tired and needed to get back to Boston on Monday.

I told Paris that I would read her book on the bus back to Boston, but I didn't, and I feel really bad about it because I completely intended to read it. I guess I just wasn't really in the mood for reading. Tonight however, I'll read it and I'll let you know what I think. As for having another book signing, Paris called me yesterday and was wondering if we could do it again. I told her that I would check to see when I could do another one. With school and everything, it makes things really difficult.

When In Manhattan... BY OLIVER PETERSON

"Sommelier and the City"

Going back and looking over last season's columns, it was discovered that with all the events and exciting things covered – never once have we looked into the gastronomic offerings that the city has. This writer is no restaurant reviewer. In fact, I've been known to indulge in a Hot Pocket or microwave burrito after work, and while in the city I'm more likely to hit a falafel stand or grab a $6 soy burger at Dojo than splurge on Nobu's fancy fare. However, I do enjoy a nice bottle of wine. It may not be food exactly, but it goes to the same place.

Unless you work in the business of wine, it's hard to really understand it without a lot of free time to be drunk or a lot of dollars to try everything. For the novice, like myself, Gotham provides quite a few places to wet your lips and quench that thirst for wine knowledge. We've got it pretty good out east, with the North Fork and the peppering of vineyards south, but these events in the city aren't usually pushing a particular brand.

One of Upper Manhattan's leading wine retailers, PJ Wine, will begin the first week of "Wine 101," this Monday. This new program will consist of seven classes aimed at beginner and intermediate wine tasters looking to learn the fundamentals of wine. One of the nation's top authorities on the subject and wine consultant to Gourmet Magazine, Michael Green, will lead the exploration of how wine is made and how to taste. Classes will be held at Astra, one of NYC's leading private venues and the catering division of Charlie Palmer's critically acclaimed restaurant, Aureole. Aside from learning some jargon and postures to impress your friends, Wine 101 will develop your palate, teach grape varieties and the intricacies of finding the right bottles for the right price. The course will begin September 27 at 6 p.m. with "Wine: Uncorked," and end Monday November 15. The 7 days runs $695, including all wines and materials. Call PJ Wine at (212) 567-5500 for more information.

Wine 101 is not the only game in town. New York is a big city with a lot of sophisticates, wannabes and connoisseurs. Another interesting journey into the Bacchanalian world is "Vino-Versity" at Divine Bar on West 54th Street. VINO-Versity is perfect for those unable to make the 7-week commitment necessary to complete Wine 101. Divine Bar offers individual "walk around" classes every other week in their fall 2004 semester. The nights will consist of samplings of multiple wines, discussions with industry professionals and topical reading materials formatted in an open marketplace style, allowing participants to roam the bar to taste the over two dozen available samples. It's a casual atmosphere that only tightens up when the guest lecturer of the day makes a presentation. The first class, Tuscany and Parmesan, launched the fall schedule, but the coming weeks are just as exciting. On Tuesday, the spicy reds and boisterous whites of Australia will be the subject of the day. Compare an array of Shiraz, Grenache, Cabernet, Merlot, Riesling, Chardonnays, and Sparkling wines coupled with barbecue inspired tapas. Each class will touch on a new and different intricacy on the lush and varied topic including: Wine and Chocolate (October 12th), Pairing Wines and Cheeses (Oct 26th), Wines of the Mediterranean (November 9th), and Wines of South America on the 23rd. Classes begin again in January after Christmas break. VINO-Versity runs Tuesdays from 6:30 - 8:30 p.m. at Divine Bar West, 236 West 54th Street between Broadway & 8th Avenue. Tickets are $35 when purchased online in advance at www.vino-versity.com and $45 at the door if available. Call 212-265-WINE for further info.

These classes are a great place to begin, and can be terrific for meeting others who share your interest. Bone up on your "spiritual" knowledge in Manhattan. Pop the cork for how far you can go. As your understanding grows, there is a wonderful world of classic vintage and rare bottles ahead. Long Island is no joke either, and once you have a basic set of skills, the wine tours here will become a richer experience. Not to mention, everyone loves a good pretentious discussion. Come on, where will you be if you don't know what a syrah actually is?

Shop 'til You Drop... With Maria Tennariello

This weekend I had friends visit for the weekend and I promised them a full day of shopping on Saturday. The problem was, my road flooded from the heavy rain. But the sun finally came out and off we went.

I decided to take a ride to Hampton Bays to Val's Closet on Main Street to see what all the excitement is about. Val's Closet is celebrating her fifth year in business at this location and is having an "anniversary celebration" with some amazing new merchandise. The prices here are always discounted and Val's Closet carries designer clothing and cocktail dresses for every occasion. This year for fall there is a larger selection of coats and jackets, leathers, silks, denims and fashionable suits. Look for the brand new fall long and short sleeve shirts at only $19.99, and don't pass up a great selection of handbags and accessories. We did not walk out of this shop empty handed, that's for sure!

Over to Bob Stevens Appliances on Old Riverhead Road in Westhampton Beach for a look at their "end of summer clearance sale" that will make you want to change all your appliances. There are one-of-a-kinds, floor models, extra inventory, scratch and dents, and many are below cost. This sale runs until Friday, September 24, so get going for the best selections.

Not only does Hildreth's Department Stores, Southampton, Bridgehampton and East Hampton, have an end of the season "blowout sale" with 25% to 75% off their great outdoor furnishings, but you should check out the new items for fall. Some of the great merchandise includes heat resistant lacquer with a cork base, placemats by Pimpernel for only $14 with matching coasters, trivets and trays to match. I love the turkey gravy boat for only $12.95 and platter $29.95. The houseware department is overflowing with new merchandise and pumpkin baskets for display that are crafted from real gourds, a rabbit corkscrew for $65, just to name a few. You can spend the entire day in these stores, for sure.

patio.com on Montauk Highway in Southampton is having their "warehouse clearance sale" with over 1,000 different patio sets available with savings up to 70% off. Don't pass up their beautiful Brunswick billiard tables and check out the deals if you buy one.

OK, now this is one of the highlights of the day. Bombay! This store is filled with so much beautiful merchandise; you almost don't know where to start. You can practically furnish your entire home here at affordable prices. There are so many little accessories such as photo frames, complete desk sets, candle holders, clocks, book ends, vases, wine holders, beaded covers for wine bottles, and they are all on sale. If you're looking for mirrors, art work, tables, chairs, leather couches, home furnishings and accessories, this is the place. I started my Christmas shopping, believe it or not! Joan the sales assistant helped us pick and choose some lovely grab bag gifts at prices you wouldn't believe. My girlfriends Joanna and Rosie shopped 'til they dropped here, and were thrilled with their purchases, not to mention the savings. Located at the Bridgehampton Commons (near King Kullen), make this one a must-stop-shop!

With the chilly weather on its way, you should think ahead and get over to the Down Factory Store at the Elegant John on Montauk Highway in East Hampton for some of the best prices in town. Stock up for winter with goose down comforters, pillows and featherbeds. They guarantee lowest prices... Don't miss all the great accessories for bed and bath here too. You will love this store. I do!

In Sag Harbor we decided to go to sigerson-morrison's "Crazy Sale" on Madison Street and we were ready, willing and able to fill our shopping bags with the sale items offered every Friday, Saturday and Sunday in the month of September. All the shoes are $110 and all bags are a cool 70% off... Be sure to get there early; the store hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. There is only one weekend left, so get going!

Until next week. Ciao and happy fall shopping!

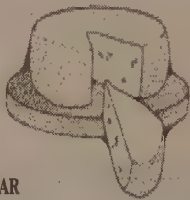

If you are having a sale, or have any questions, please e-mail me at: Shoptil@danspapers.com I will be happy to hear from you.

Dan's Fashion The Perfect Fit

There are few things that can be more frustrating than shopping for clothes. Have you ever walked into a shop with the joyous expectation of finding at least one treasure fitted perfectly to your body, only to find that three hours later and with aching feet you have exhausted all options and have only a pair of sweats or some spandex monstrosity to show for all your hard work? Have you ever wished for something unique and charming to wear and found instead only the garish, trendy and tired? If so, then you are part of a disgruntled shopping elite, which will never be mollified by ready-to-wear items. These are based on a commercial pattern, which is simply a non-existent "average" of body types designed to make the garment fit the most bodies the best. The truth of the matter is, if you are going to spend any sizeable amount of money on clothing, not only should you absolutely love the product, but it should also fit you perfectly. Have you ever settled for a pair of slacks because they fit you best and not necessarily because they fit you well? The $300 you just paid for them should not have to be followed up by a trip to the tailor's for alterations. Imagine a day when nothing in your wardrobe pinches or rides up on you, when there are no unsightly pressure creases and when the center button of your blouse will never again spread eagle at the most inopportune moment. This little exercise in visualizing bliss is actually attainable and closer at hand than you might think! The secrets of homemakers are being quickly eclipsed by our fast-paced lives and the wisdom which generations of attentive craftsmanship has yielded are fading into whispers from a past age. It is not too late! Sewing is indeed a dying art, but for you tragedians and classicists, for you fashion conscious ladies and even for those of you who are only in need of the perfect velvet pillow for your divan that will finally tie the room together, I implore you to heed the call that will be the solution to your problems. Let the quality of your wardrobe soar to the height of your imagination! Reawaken the nimbleness of your mother's fingers as she carefully negotiated that feminine and flattering calico dress under the rising and sinking needle of her trusty Singer. It is not beyond your reach. In fact, you can purchase your very own sewing machine without leaving the comfort of the Hamptons

"Seamstress," by John G. Young

at Southampton Sewing and Vacuum. Call 283-4310 and ask for Kelly.

The author is proud to recommend the Bernina line of sewing machines – they are all of high quality, especially models number 153 and higher. The precise stitching afforded by the DS motor, the professional finish and the ease of use of these machines are all compelling arguments for them, but the most compelling, especially for a beginner, is that every Bernina comes with complimentary guide classes at the dealership from which it was purchased. If you are still hesitating, head to the streets of Astoria, Queens or the other fabric districts in the city and weave your way in and out of the charming little shops, which display their wares over every free inch of space. You will find breathtaking, soft, flowing silks for your newest dress, you will find beautiful gabardine woolens from the finest manufacturers in Europe, light enough to be slacks but heavy enough to keep you warm in the winter, you will find dotted Swiss batiste like your grandmother's old blouse and if you are lucky you may even find a savvy shop owner with access to designer ends who will sell them to you with a knowing smile that connoisseurs of the finest fabrics share only with one another.

If a few guide classes are not enough for you to feel comfortable setting about your new life as a tailor, the Fashion Institutes in the City can surely oblige your every need. If a degree program and institutionalized learning is not your idea of a good time, there is one little treasure I know of – an anomaly, a vestige from the past set in the quaint but beautiful town of Boulder, Colorado which bustles with creative energy, aware of its own importance and questing after perfection. It is called Elfriede's Fine Fabrics and Studio Bernina and is headed up by master tailor Susan Igou. After a move midway through next year to a bigger space, they intend to set up a sort of summer camp for adults, at the behest of many women from all across the country who want to partake in this oasis of garment construction but do not live in Colorado. You can keep tabs on their progress by checking out their website at www.studiobernina.com. Until then, I wish you all the best of luck fending for yourselves among the racks.

AN EAST END KID: JOURNEY TO ERNIE

BY EMILY HART POST
WITH A LITTLE HELP FROM
KATLEAN DE MONCHY AND DAVID
POST

Now that I'm three and a third, it was time to go back to Sesame Place - a theme park in Pennsylvania, about 90 minutes away from New York City. It was a long drive for Dad but I was quiet as a mouse because I wanted to save up all my energy for a day of fun. When we got there it was very crowded and we parked far away from the park. Since Dad forgot the stroller, he paid the price of having to carry me on his shoulders to the front gate. When we got in I studied the map (see my picture) and decided to visit Elmo and take a picture with my favorite furry monster (also see picture). When I looked around the corner I screamed with delight because Cassie and Ord from Dragon Tales were there (or is it was there because it is a dragon with two heads?) Wow! So we had to wait on a long line to take a picture and give them a hug (see another picture). We went on Big Bird's Balloon Race, which goes way up, and I heard Mom say "maybe it's too scary" (for me). I think she was talking about herself because I was yelling, "this is fun" while Mom's face was turning some bright colors. We saw lots of shows and all of the Sesame characters, Elmo, Ernie, Bert, Big Bird, Oscar, Grover, Snuffy, Count Von Count, were there. I did not go on the water rides and splash places because we had to go home but I am already asking: "Can I go again?" I love Sesame Place but Dad offered some valuable advice... when the weather is beautiful the park is very popular so you have to go early or go for two days or you'll be doing more waiting than doing.

The Power Of Food

We've all heard of the importance of antioxidants. But what are they? Antioxidants protect our cells. During normal cellular metabolism, oxygen can create free radicals: damaging cellular by-products that may cause advanced aging, cancer, cardiovascular disease, heart damage, cataracts, degenerative diseases like arthritis, and a weak immune system. Antioxidants counteract these unstable free radicals before they are able to cause damage. When antioxidants are at work, they bind to the free radicals, and then either repair cellular damage or transform them into non-damaging compounds. The human body does have a natural mechanism that protects you from most cell damage, but certain environmental factors including cigarette smoke, radiation, excessive sunlight, certain drugs, and stress can increase free radicals.

Antioxidant rich foods include nuts, grains, some meat, poultry, fish, and most brightly or deeply colored fruits and vegetables. Good sources of antioxidants are carrots, spinach, tomatoes, and red bell peppers. Antioxidant vitamins are found in are beta-carotene (a form of vitamin A) and vitamins E and C. Beta-carotene can be found in dark green leafy vegetables, and most foods that are orange: carrots, cantaloupe, apricots, pumpkins, mangoes, sweet potatoes, and squash. Also found in dark green leafy vegetables is lutein, most often associated with healthy eyes.

Lycopene is most commonly found in tomatoes and tomato products but is also found in watermelons, guava, and red grapefruit. Over the past 10 years, lycopene has been studied for its role in cancer prevention at Harvard Medical School. Four foods were found to be associated with a low risk of developing prostate cancer: strawberries, tomatoes, tomato sauce, and pizza with tomato sauce. A German study found that more lycopene is released when a tomato is crushed and cooked, as opposed to the tomato or tomato juice being fresh. The study also found that while tomato sauce is being cooked, the addition of oil raises the blood lycopene level.

An antioxidant called pterostilbene, found in blueberries and grapes, activates a cellular structure that helps lower cholesterol. One study showed pterostilbene to be more powerful than resveratrol, another cholesterol-lowering antioxidant found in red wine and grapes. Pterostilbene is a natural compound that appears to work as effectively as a commercial drug. So far there haven't been any side effects or toxicity associated with pterostilbene. Within the next 6 months, Dr. Agnes M. Rimando will be able to complete her study and tell the world exactly how many blueberries or how much of a supplement will be needed to meet anti-cholesterol benefits.

An unbelievably delicious way to ingest the antioxidants called flavonoids is consuming dark chocolate. Known for some time for its heart protecting properties, it has recently been found to improve the function of blood vessels. This was a study done in August of 2004 by Greek scientists. 17 volunteers ate either 100 grams of dark chocolate or a non-chocolate substitute, and it was determined that function in young healthy adults increased for at least 3 hours.

Drinking tea is another well-publicized way to get your antioxidants. Every kind of tea is derived from the leaves of a single evergreen plant, Camellia sinensis. The less processed green tea contains higher levels of antioxidants than most others. One study showed that steeping green or black tea for 5 minutes or longer released over 80% of its catechins, which are strong inhibitors of cancer growth. Tea catechins seek out oxidants before cell damage occurs, decrease the size and incidence of chemically induced tumors, and stop the growth of tumor cells. In China, green tea is a regular part of one's diet. One study found that in 1,800 men, tea drinkers were half as likely to develop esophageal or stomach cancer as the men who drank little tea. The National Cancer Institute researchers are also studying green tea and its therapeutic effects.

The American Heart Association continues to recommend that people try to meet their antioxidant requirements through food, as opposed to supplements, which are still being researched. This recommended variety of food includes: 6 or more servings of breads, 5 servings of fruits and vegetables, 2-4 servings of low fat dairy, and up to 6 ounces of lean meat, fish, or poultry.

When shopping for foods containing antioxidants, vitamins, and minerals, look for those that are rich and bright in color. While in season, opt for fresh fruits and vegetables. During the winter, frozen fruits and vegetables are always a less expensive alternative that can usually prove to be just as healthy. Consider the cost of eating healthy foods as an investment in our futures. It is important to keep in mind that what we put into our bodies now will affect us for a lifetime.

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

The calendar tells us that the summer of '04 has come to an end, yet we can still bask in the glory of the late summer harvest. Brian Halweil, local writer and senior researcher for World Watch, an environmental think tank, initiated the newly organized Sag Harbor's Farmers Market as part of Harborfest on Saturday, September 11.

Sponsored by the East End Convivium of Slow Food USA, local farmers busily arranged their wares on picnic tables, laden with baskets of sparkling vegetables fresh from the fields, colorful bouquets of flowers, icy containers of fresh oysters, clams and mussels, jars of wild blossom honey, an array of raw milk cheeses, breads, pastries and more.

I was in food heaven as I spied gorgeous reddish green heirloom tomatoes just waiting to be sliced and teamed with fresh basil and a lacing of extra-virgin olive oil, young small zucchini to grill and dress with lemony vinaigrette, thin tapers of crisp yellow and green string beans to simmer with onions and tomatoes the way my mother did, eggplants in varying shades of pale to deep purple to sauté for an oriental salad or pair with pasta, and fleshy bok choy to steam or stir fry. Fresh oysters and clams to throw on the grill and serve with a mignonette sauce, a drizzle of raw unfiltered honey on my husband's morning toast, or one of my favorite things to eat – kettle cooked local potato chips to nibble with a glass of wine at the end of a workday. These were just some of the delicious glories awaiting the slowly assembled folk who seem to gather from every direction to take advantage of the bounty at Harborfest, celebrating Sag Harbor's heritage.

Brian reports that the Farmers Market, with its social element, was a resounding success and will hopefully continue Saturday mornings through Thanksgiving, weather permitting.

ORIENTAL EGGPLANT SALAD

This recipe was prepared by Jacques Pepin in a cooking class at Cooktique, my former cooking school. I have never forgotten it and when I went through my Jacques files, it turned up almost immediately. It was meant to be.

Serves 6

- 3 narrow Japanese eggplants, about 1 1/2 pounds
- Peanut or vegetable oil for cooking
- 3 cloves garlic, finely chopped
- 1 tablespoon light soy sauce
- 2 tablespoons rice wine vinegar
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 1/4 teaspoon hot oil or dried red pepper flakes
- 2 teaspoons grated ginger
- 2 tablespoons dark sesame oil
- 1/4 teaspoon fennel seeds

1. Trim ends of eggplants and cut crosswise into 1/4-inch slices.

2. Place oil in a large skillet to a depth of 1/3 inch and when hot, add enough eggplant slices to just cover the bottom of the skillet. Sauté for approximately 2 minutes each side until eggplant is lightly brown and a bit soft. Drain on paper towels and transfer to a bowl as they are done. Repeat with remaining eggplant.

3. Stir to combine remaining ingredients and pour over the eggplant. Toss carefully to mix. Let marinate for at least 2 hours or up to several days. Refrigerate in a suitable container. Bring to room temperature when ready to serve.

GRILLED ZUCCHINI, ROMAN STYLE

A typical country dish prepared with zucchini from the local markets.

Serves 4-6

- 3 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
- 2 medium garlic cloves, finely chopped
- 1 1/4 pounds small garden fresh zucchini
- Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
- 1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice
- 3 tablespoons chopped fresh mint leaves

1. Heat oil in a small skillet and, over low heat, add the garlic. Sauté until garlic is aromatic, about 2 minutes. Remove from heat. Scrub zucchini clean then cut in half lengthwise and brush both sides with some of the garlic oil.

2. Prepare a charcoal or gas grill to medium high. Grill the zucchini, skin side down, until golden brown, about 3 minutes, turn and cook until tender, about 3-4 minutes longer. Cut each half at a sharp angle into 2-3 pieces and place in a bowl. Season with salt and pepper to taste.

3. Add lemon juice, mint and remaining garlic oil. Toss to mix and taste to adjust seasoning, if necessary. Marinate for at least 2 hours; serve at room temperature.

FIJOLETTES or FASOLAKIA

Green beans and Tomatoes

The Greeks tend to cook their vegetables for a long time. This dish, adopted by my Sephardic ancestors while living in Greece, was a family favorite despite the long cooking. The flavors meld together beautifully, giving the beans a spicy richness.

Serves 4-6

- 1 pound long thin string beans
- 3 tablespoons olive oil
- 1 large onion, finely chopped
- 1-2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
- 2 large ripe tomatoes, cored and rinsed
- 1/2 teaspoon coarse salt
- Freshly ground pepper
- 1-2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice

1. Top and tail the string bean and rinse clean. Pat dry with paper towels and set aside.

2. Warm oil in a heavy skillet, put in onions and sauté 2-3 minutes until transparent. Add garlic and sauté 30-40 seconds longer. Add the beans and cook over medium-low heat, stirring occasionally for 4 to 5 minutes. Cut tomatoes into 1-inch pieces and add to beans. Season with salt and freshly ground pepper to taste and stir to mix. Add just enough water to barely cover the beans. With cover ajar, simmer over very low heat about 30 minutes. Add a little more water to the pan if evaporation occurs while cooking. Sprinkle with lemon juice to taste and serve warm or at room temperature. The dish also reheats beautifully.

Skin deep with Samantha Altea

Fall's Face

When you're scouring the stores for tweed, boucle, pencil skirts, animal print...the retro styling and pretty accents I mentioned last week in fall clothing trends, you might also like to get a few key items for your fall make-up bag. Beauty is only skin deep, it's true, but after all, the make-up you put on that skin can make the world of difference to how you look, and beneath the skin, how you feel. This fall's make-up, as usual, perfectly complements this year's fashion. It's flattering and fun and worth investing just a little time, money and effort to achieve. But what is it? When spotting the perfect lavender cashmere sweater, a key item for this year's closet, should we be fluttering blue, brown, black, even purple mascaraed lashes in excitement? What color lipstick should one wear when puckering up in said sweater, perhaps even to kiss a special someone for buying it for us...Well, one can dream. But what does go with lavender? Animal print and tweed, what make-up should you wear so as to look polished, professional...with it.

As promised, I'm not going to leave you wearing last year's make-up with this year's clothes. Heaven forbid. We've got you covered to face fall, in style.

The first thing to note is that make-up now, like the light translucent look of spring/summer, is very retro in feel and look, echoing the way that fashion is also leaning. But for fall, make-up gets more grown up, lady like, polished. The look is more professional, but also very pretty and not too overdone.

Building the foundation:

There's a distinct look for foundation. It's a matte finish, reminiscent of the skin tone and look of the '30s and '40s. It's not sheer and shiny, or even nonexistent, like the summer. This year, foundation is a tad heavier than has been seen for a while. There's no need to cake it on and looked too heavily made up, but it's definitely a good solid base that we'll be seeing as a trend. For a wonderful foundation, you might like to try Kanebo - Total Finish. It's an unusual cake foundation that works as both cr me and powder all in one. It's great for people who don't wear a lot of foundation and for those who aren't the best at applying. It's quick and easy, but at the same time, gives a wonderful flawless looking skin. Kanebo is hard to find, but beloved by the fashion and make-up industry, the "secret" weapon of many a model, or celeb, Kanebo's definitely worth the hunt. Shhhh...go to www.kanebo.com, or you can find it at Barneys or Bergdorf's in NYC. Ask an assistant in store to help you match the color to your skin. This is important to perfect, so that you don't look like you're wearing a mask.

The Eyes have it.

According to MAC cosmetics, there are 4 distinct make-up looks for fall. 1) The natural, buff look, with taupe to tan colors on eyes, cheeks, and lips. 2) The sophisticated, '40s film noir Hollywood look. 3) Girlishly pretty, but grown up - a lady in waiting, society, polished sort of look. 4) Subzero palette of whites and cold-toned neutrals, almost no eye color at all.

Eye colors you will see are blues and mauves, as well as tans and natural hues, taupes and greens that complement tweed, camel and the browns that are so hot this season. If you're going for the smokey-eyed retro Hollywood look, modernize this old favorite, and smoke out the eyes with blues, mauves and plums. I spoke with makeup artist Karlo, whose make-up has been seen from Vogue to "Sex and the City" and celebrities galore - so he knows a thing or three about make-up - and suggests we try using Longcils Boncza "Longcilextender mascara in blue, or brown. He says, "The lashes simply bloom much longer and thicker, without the worry of any artificial fibers getting into the eyes. I absolutely love this product, it's like 'now you don't see them, now you do.'" Karlo also loves the cake mascara from Longcils Boncza, which comes in all of this year's hot colors. "It can be used for many purposes. I use it to build volume little by little. But it can also be used as an eyeliner when mixed with water." Two products in one, voila. Longcils Boncza are eye experts and so you should also check out their Crayon Irise Iridescent Eye Shadow Pencils, liquid liners and even liquid shadows - they're amazing. Longcils can be found at Whites Pharmacy in East Hampton, or Kevin Maple Salon in Southampton.

Cheek to cheek. Powder blush can be too much on top of matte foundation, so balance this out with just a touch of color provided by cream or liquid blush.

Kisses and make-up:

Lip color should echo your choice of eye color. Plums and taupes are huge this year, as is pink, but on the darker side of pink. Both matte and a more sheer hint of color is perfect, depending on the look you're going for. If it's the pretty, polished look, try a sheer hint of color. For the retro Hollywood look, go bold, matte, or high gloss. And don't forget to always match lip liner to lipstick. This year, do line lips for a more polished look.

Organic Cosmetics

Some friends and I were hiking the Blue Ridge Mountains when we unknowingly stepped into an abyss of sludge that, in our frantic struggle to get out, sucked the sneakers clear off our feet and into the depths of Virginia's earth. While we managed to pull ourselves out of nature's most well disguised tourist trap, we had to trek back to the car barefoot as the sludge hardened to our bodies. It cracked under the hot July sun. We picked it off to pass time.

When we got back to the house we showered and, to our amazement, discovered that the sludge rendered our skin supple as a baby's bottom! Whatever combination of dirt, bark, mud, water, carcass, what have you, hydrated our bodies and made our skin glow for days. We were certain we'd discovered the fountain of youth, nature's secret concoction hidden within the Blue Ridge. We were confident the contents of the pit could be bottled and sold like Le Mer, $1,000 a bottle, maybe more. With the craze that has surrounded organic cosmetics, it may not have been so far-fetched.

In the past ten years, we have become conscious of what's being put into and onto our bodies and, in response, cosmetic companies are breaking the confines of labs and venturing outdoors in search of organic ingredients. What they are finding is that Mother Nature has a remedy for almost every beauty ailment. Take, for example, nettle, a desert plant that's found in New Mexico and Arizona. Nettle can retain water for days and, when applied topically, can turn oily skin into a smooth and balanced complexion.

It makes sense, and with an emergence of a more health-conscious society, it makes even more sense that companies are feeding this cosmetic craze by putting out lines of products with ingredients plucked right from our own backyards.

Companies like the family-owned Siciley make natural botanical products with no synthetics, which are commonly added to give cosmetics a longer shelf life. These additives color oxidize the product, separating and changing the make up of most crèmes. Sunscreen also has the same effect on products, so Siciley keeps everything SPF free. They use all natural extracts, so the only scent you get is from the plant itself.

The now ubiquitous Burt's Bees is another company that prides itself on their earth friendly, natural personal care products. The company distributes lotion, balm, soap and makeup that boast the most basic ingredients. The Carrot Nutritive Day Crème consists of water, vegetable fat, sugar and beeswax and a variety of oils - sunflower, avocado, and grapeseed - just to name a few. Their lip balm is beeswax, oil, rosemary and vitamin E. Even their eyeliner is a simple mixture of wax and oil.

The Body Shop, known for their variety of lotions, scrubs, and fragrances, refrains from using alcohol to preserve their products. While adding alcohol can sus-tain the shelf life of a product, it can be detrimental to one's skin. Rather, the Body Shop opts to leave the products alcohol-free, and instead offers a money back guarantee if something has gone bad or expired. Aside from being consumer-conscious, they are also environmentally aware, giving money to those who recycle the empty bottles. Offering lines of lotions made from Shea nuts, which contain a natural SPF that blocks UV rays, to hemp, which, coincidentally, has the same pH as human skin, allowing for near perfect absorption and a non-greasy handshake. The Body Shop is continually offering products that originate from and return to the environment.

Aveda products are some of the most well-researched and thought-given products available. Aveda's founder and creator, Horst M. Rechelbacher, is an expert in the chemical constitution of plants, having pioneered plant-based aromatherapy. His Aveda salons and counters offer a selection of hair and skin care products that are botanically based and derived from both plants and flowers.

While the magical Blue Ridge Sludge has yet to be marketed, both Aveda and The Body Shop have stores right here in Bridgehampton, stocked with natural products that offer a solution to any beauty predicament. Additionally, Siciley can be bought at Sak's Fifth Ave in Southampton and Burt's Bees can be picked up in any drug store. Also check online for additional organic beauty products.

INTERIORS & EXTERIORS

The Garden At Rock Cottage by Lance Brilliantine

Onion for All Gardens

One of the most interesting, eye-catching, and rewarding garden flowers is an onion! Who would have thought this staple of the dinner table is one of the more striking and desirable garden plants? If you have not tried growing ornamental onions (Alliums) – one of the easiest plants to grow – it is worth considering adding alliums to your list of “must have” garden plants. Alliums make excellent garden displays and are useful cut flowers. (They are supposed to be edible – though we prefer the flowers!)

Onions are part of a large, varied family of plants named Lillaceae that includes the Asiatic and Oriental lilies. Ornamental onions are in a genus called Alliaceae (Allium).

Allium is derived from the Latin word for “garlic.” While there are more than 700 varieties worldwide, only about 40 are cultivated for flowers. Similar to garden lilies, ornamental onions grow from bulbs.

Alliums planted now will help bridge the gap between spring-flowering bulbs and summer-flowering annuals and perennials. They produce extraordinary flower clusters that are borne on strong, singular stems. The flowers appear above the leaves as densely populated spheres or ovals composed of hundreds of tiny blooms packed tightly together. In some varieties, flowers may be loose, dangling, or upright airy groupings of larger flowers.

Members of this genus do best in locations where they receive full sun, but have some shelter from winds. The plants require very well-drained soil, and the plants do well in rocky, dry soil conditions. They tend to rot in soils that are wet and do not provide good drainage.

Plant the bulbs as you would most Spring-flowering bulbs, e.g., smaller allium bulbs can be planted about four inches deep and three inches apart; larger bulbs can be planted eight inches deep and eight inches apart. Mulch for winter protection, but do not bother to fertilize.

The foliage of alliums is generally not appealing. For this reason, alliums are best planted in mass groupings where the flowers collectively produce a bold effect. Interspersing alliums among other plants, like hosta, will create a very desirable landscape effect. One desirable feature of alliums, and a benefit to East End gardeners, is that they are animal and insect proof. Deer, squirrels, moles, mice, and chipmunks avoid eating the plants. No serious insect pests or diseases attack them.

The bulbs survive well for a number of years with no care. Bulbs tend to multiply and can be divided in late Spring after the plants have bloomed. Seed propagation is possible, but tends to take too long to produce flowers, so we do not recommend this approach.

Over the years, we have tried a number of the popular species. The following seem to produce impressive results on the East End: Allium jesdianum – large violet or purple umbels of four to six inches across blooming on 28-inch stems from May through July; Allium karataviense (Red Globe) – a stunning red-purple flower that blooms in May and June on 12 to 16 inch stems; Allium gigantum – as the name implies, enormous blue flowers on four-foot stems in

May and June; Allium christophi (Globemaster) – huge, spherical, purple flowers up to ten inches across blooming in May and June; Allium rosenbachianum – violet umbels of about six inches blooming in April and May; and Allium flatunese – producing looser umbels of red-purple on two foot to five foot stems in May.

When purchasing bulbs, remember that, as with many things in life, size matters when it comes to alliums. Be sure to purchase bulbs from reputable companies or suppliers. The most popular allium bulbs such as “Globemaster” and “Gladiator” are carried by many of the reputable nurseries on the East End, but tend to sell out quickly – so purchase soon. The larger-flowered alliums can also be costly, but well worth the investment. We have had great luck over the years purchasing some of the less common species through mail order companies such as Dutch Gardens and Van Engelen.

We believe alliums are an essential plant to include in every Spring garden display. The magnificent flowers add dramatic interest, appeal, and color, especially when grouped in mass plantings of seven or more bulbs. Because the plants are deer-proof, they do not carry the potential for disappointment of many other Spring-flowering bulbs. And, who could imagine such fantastic results from a “no care” plant? We highly recommend alliums for East End gardens!

Why Hurricanes Spawn Tornadoes

The latest string of hurricanes hitting the Southeast of these United States has prompted me to provide some new insights into why so many tornadoes are being spawned, as in Charles, Frances and Ivan. It is the tornadoes that, to a large degree, are the cause of the many deaths and destruction associated with hurricanes which can have winds of 150 mph or so. Tornadoes can have winds double that.

When a hurricane passes from the sea to the land something happens to change its character. It suddenly becomes more than a system of broad heavy winds which are quite damaging by themselves. As the rotating bands of winds encounter the changes we have made to the land in the form of buildings, especially tall buildings, a phenomenon of nature takes place. This is known as Bernoulli's principle, which states that if you increase the speed of a gas or a liquid, the pressure drops. Low pressure is the main ingredient in a tornado.

The structures we have placed on land become what are known in scientific circles as "vortex generators." They force the wind to go around them, causing this already fast moving wind to speed up even further. As the wind speeds up going around these buildings or skyscrapers, changes occur in these winds that cause tornadoes to form. A tornado is a vortex. It is the same thing you see when you row a boat and create the little whirlpools in back of the oar as the water flows around the oar. Water and air are the same in this regard. Tornadoes form because the air moving around the building has to speed up relative to the rest of the wind because it has a longer distance to travel around the structure lying in its way. When this air gets to the other side of the building it curls up into its own tight little low pressure, faster and faster moving circle. It becomes a tornado. These violent whirlpools of air didn't exist in the hurricane as it passed over the ocean because there are no "vortex generator" type buildings on the ocean. Were it not for the tornadoes that are born in hurricanes over land, damage and death would be significantly less from these storms. In a way, you could say that we ourselves are responsible for the dramatic increase in tornadoes that we see today.

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA), in their 14th Symposium on Global Change and Climate Variations, tell us that since 1950, when records were started, there has been an almost linear increase in tornado events. There were 200 tornadoes in the early 1950s, to about 1000 annually by the early 1990s.

The only difference between then and now is the many cities, infrastructures and buildings that we have added to the landscape, structures that make the winds of thunderstorms and hurricanes speed up and increase the energy needed to form what we know as tornadoes.

When a skyscraper or tall building is proposed, it is usually subjected to testing with computer models to see what effect the wind will have on the building. Maybe it is time to find out what effect the building will have on the wind. Maybe it is time to take a close look at what these ego-building buildings are doing to our environment and our weather patterns. Maybe we just have too many oars in the water.

—Will Jansen

Will Jansen is a freelance writer living in Southampton, N.Y. His thoughts on tornado formation are excerpted from a book he is writing about how the world works. 25 years of weather forecasting for the airlines as well as teaching a college course in meteorology form the basis for his knowledge.

Real Estates by Diane Strecker

In Noyac, a study is underway to alleviate traffic issues on Noyac Road where summer traffic wreaks havoc nearby to the bend of Cromers Market as well as others on that road, which seems to have become a Montauk Highway bypass. The increased activity and parking along the roadway has residents concerned, and ideas to remedy the growing problem were brought to the town board last week.

Town planners are working on a plan to be presented again in October

Land on the Market:

In Mattituck, the heart of the North Fork wine country, there are just slightly under 90 acres of land considered to be one of the highest points on eastern Long Island. In addition to having 1200 ft of LI Sound frontage it has farm views in every direction. It is listed with Syma Joffe Gerard at $9 million.

And in Orient, one of the oldest family owned farms on the North Fork is also listed for $9 million. Seventy five percent of its more than 35 acres is already cleared for farming, and the rest remains wooded and natural with 257' of waterfront that runs along Long Beach Bay. Farm views as well as water views of Orient State Park and beyond can be seen throughout the piece that has development rights already in place. It is listed with Beninati Associates.

There are 22 Sound-front acres in Cutchogue for $5,385,000. The waterfront runs 285 ft and the property's sanctuary-like grounds looks over acres of farms and agricultural preserve. It is listed with Prudential Douglas Elliman's Southold office.

In Bridgehampton horse country the 20 acres of rolling hills that surround a 3 acre lake. The property has three ponds and five waterfalls. It is set inside 200 acres of reserve filled with horse and hiking trails. It has already been subdivided into four five acre lots and is being offered both separately and together. It is listed with the Corcoran Group in Southampton at $16,500,000 in its entirety.

Twenty-seven acres on the Montauk oceanfront is sub-dividable into two separate parcels. Located on the bluffs of the Montauk Moorlands, the property offers ultimate seclusion. It is listed with multiple Montauk brokers at $8,500,000.

East End Estates on the Market:

Starting with the highest price:

Three Ponds Farm in Bridgehampton was first listed at $75 million. It is 20,000 sq ft on 60 acres and, of course, has three ponds.

Burnt Point, at $50 million, has 18,000 sq ft on 25 acres on Georgica Pond. It was recently the subject of an auction, but is still for sale.

The Church Estate's 5.7 acres and five houses at $45 million.

Maycroft's 45 acres and mansion just sold for $20 million in North Haven.

The Goose Creek 25,000 sq ft Villa in Wainscott is 5.3 acres and going for $24 million.

Southampton's Swans Way has 12,000 sq ft and an ocean view on 5.7 acres and remains for sale.

The 10,000 sq ft traditional Tower Hill in Bridgehampton has ocean views and is on 21 acres, for $22 million.

Rentals:

An Estate on Further Lane in East Hampton goes for $350,000 year-round. It is located on white sand dune oceanfront and is 3,500 sq ft of stone and glass on 3.25 acres. There is a 50' heated pool, expansive terracing and complete privacy. Listed with Allan M. Schneider in East Hampton.

The Numbers:

There are more than 100 major real estate brokerages in the Hamptons, that span the area from Westhampton to Montauk. The highest number of firms is in East Hampton with 15. Montauk has 11. North Sea has one.

Dear Dan,

Dear Dan,

I am one of the parents that always reads Emily's East End Kid column with my two and a half year old daughter. We laugh and smile over the column at Kitchen and Coffee in Bellport.

But in my opinion the best column was the 9/10/04 column. It could that be because of the picture of my daughter Maggie and my husband Neal? I loved seeing my two favorite people in print!

WHAT DO YOU REALLY THINK?

Dear Dan,

Dan, your paper is the highlight of my week! However, your recent (consistent) endorsements of John Kerry are becoming a tad repetitive. Although I am not a Bush fan, per se, I wholeheartedly believe he is the right President, at the right time. But that's beside my point. My point is, I look to Dan's Papers for entertainment and for local, Hamptons-based news. The consistent Kerry endorsements are really becoming offensive to me.

I've voted both Democrat and Republican as well, and as a New Yorker who lost two family members and three friends in the attack on 9/11, I've come to realize that the inability of Clinton (who I voted for) to respond forcefully to the 1993 attack, the Cole bombing, the Embassy bombing (I could go on) led to the idea that America could be "whacked" without retaliation. It's easy to have an opinion that Kerry is the answer when you live in the East End...a peaceful, idyllic place...but the real world doesn't play as nicely as the East End. Please stop pushing Kerry, okay? We hear you, we get it.

Thank you.

Dear Dan and Jan Silver,

Summer is winding down and with it the ninth season of the Hamptons Shakespeare Festival. Our success this season would not have been possible without your continued support. And we thank you!

Because of the coverage you gave to the Festival, we were able to create a magical summer of Shakespeare under the stars for thousands of people on the East End. It is a pleasure working with you as always.

CAR TALK

Dear Dan,

In response to your article about road rage I say this, isn't it ironic that after I wrote to you about a situation in Manorville that involved road rage, you too experienced a similar situation. What isn't ironic is how you responded to my situation compared to your own.

To refresh your memory your response to me was we should all smile, wave and tip our hats whenever we pass each other. Isn't it funny how karma works? When I expressed concern about road rage, you disregarded my concerns with a sarcastic reply that took all of thirty seconds of your time. However, when you experienced a similar situation it turned into a three-page article about road rage.

It is clear in your article that you had several options on how to handle the situation and you chose none of them. I guess a man is only as big as the car he is driving.

Lori Mclean

The road rage you are referring to was about you. This road rage was about me! -D.R.

Police Blotter

High Stepping His Way To An Arrest in Fleeced Footwear. Was it just a week ago a "heel heister" tried to hoof away in a pair of purloined shoes at Payless Shoes in Bridgehampton Commons? Now it seems as if it is a start of a brand new trend - walk in with oldies and walk out newsies. According to Southampton Village Police reports, the manager at the shopping center shoe outlet reported seeing a fellow slip on a new pair of shoes and amble out the door. While the fad appears to be catching on, so are the men in blue, catching those would be sole thieves.

The Bottle Made Him Do It.

Cast aside right next to his car, a bottle of 'fire water' proved to be anything but 'joy juice.' According to East Hampton Town police reports, an East Hampton man was found splayed over the wheel of his Isuzu on Northwest Landing Road over Labor Day weekend. The guzzling geezer was spied weaving up and down the lane and looking dazed and confused, while his vehicle loudly moaned and groaned - apparently from front end damage, which he was unable to explain.

Meow! Cat Fight in Deli Brings On Cops. Two frisky felines with claws bared came to scratches (and hair pulling) at Brent's Market on Montauk Highway in Amagansett. While the cause of the fray remains under question, it appears their me(ow)lee was captured on video tape.

It's a Keying Shame! It seems the natives were restless over at Liar's Saloon on West Lake Drive in Montauk following an all-night session. Like a scene ripped from the "Westies," two hotheaded hooligans got into a physical fracas at the bar, resulting in felony charges for one and an ambulance ride to Southampton Hospital for the other. It's alleged that during the dispute, a key was used to debase the victim's face. The key-wielding slasher then slipped out of the "saloon," but police canvassing the area following an SOS spied a man fitting his description. The 'perp' was arrested and charged with assault in the second degree, while the 'vic' was released from the hospital after treatment later the same morning.

Fighting Like Girls Disrupts Diners at Hip Hot Spot.

Two Manhattanites invited two of their City friends out to a house on Stephen Hands Path. One thing led to another and the pairs, let's just call them "Couple A" and "Couple B" got into a quarrel. So "Couple A" kicks "Couple B" out of the house. Later the same evening, the fighting foursome ran into each other at JL East restaurant on Montauk Highway in East Hampton. Throwing manners to the wayside, the quartet engaged in hair pulling (always a winner), pushing and shoving, which netted the dueling duets an audience with authorities.

Had Gas in a Big Way. No, not that kind of gas! Apparently, an excavation undertaken by Suffolk County Water Authority workers on Further Lane in East Hampton Village resulted in a gas main break. Police closed off the area until the gas was turned off.

Gone Fishin'. Over at the Montauk Marine Basin in the "Sport Fishing Capital of the World" an eager beaver fisherman up to no good tripped an alarm system. Scan Security called the proprietor, who discovered a second-floor window broken and three fishing poles strewn around the roof deck.

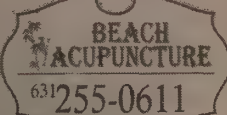

Four Punk Pugilists Attempt To Entertain Themselves By Causing Harm To Another.

In a case of perhaps not having enough to keep 'em busy, four teenagers started and finished a ruckus in the Royal Atlantic Motel parking lot in Montauk. It is alleged the four youths were tossing pebbles at a car in the lot. When the owner of vehicle asked them to stop, the foursome, who appear to be on their way to becoming juvenile delinquents, began to harass the fellow. When all was said and done, the teenage thugs shattered the windshield and rear window of the car along with punching and kicking the owner.

STOP FOR TURTLES From late spring through the fall, our indigenous turtles roam their now fragmented environment. As they wander out onto the roadways, they are often struck by speeding and unexpected motorists. These precious turtles are slow moving and can be easily avoided. When frightened, they withdraw into their shells and resemble an elliptical stone in the road. Please drive with care and help a turtle cross the road.
